ALL EYES ON QUEBEC

Optimism is running high in Ottawa over what appears to be the successful outcome of the federal-provincial constitutional conference there this week

Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers reached agreement on a feasible formula for repatriation of Canada's constitution. See Page 2 for details.

All eyes will be on Quebec between now and the June conference in Victoria, because it was that province which caused the Fulton-Favreau constitutional amendment formula to be scrapped.

Following this week's conference Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa expressed some optimism but refused to make firm comment until the new formula is discussed in the Quebec legislature. Story on Page 2.

Stage Set For Historic Victoria Meet

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The nation's government leaders Tuesday set the stage for turning their next meeting June 14-16 in Victoria into an event equalling the historic Charlottetown conference of the last century.

The participants at the latter became known as the "fathers of confederation."

If the participants at Victoria fulfill the surprisingly strong and broad promise evoked by their two-day meeting here, they could go down in Canadian history as the "fathers of the constitution."

Jubilation Among the Ranks

Prime Minister Trudeau's elated "great breakthrough" claim for the surprisingly substantial progress reflected the jubilation that permeates the ranks of an army of experts and officials who have been preparing the groundwork for the past three years.

Some have seen an analogy between the Charlottetown conference and the one coming in Victoria. Most appear to believe that this week's meetings have finally set the bandwagon rolling towards establishment of the first properly-framed constitution in Canada, based on an extensive rewriting and expansion of the script outline in the British North America Act.

Many agree with the prime minister that the real push came from ordinary Canadians who have turned out 7,000-strong already at some 40 meetings held in 25 cities since September by the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution.

Their Message Got Through

Their impassioned and impatient demands for changes great and small in the constitution are believed to have finally gotten some of the message through to provincial politicians that the federal-provincial talks had better start producing some results.

Co-chairman Mark MacGuigan (L-Windsor-Walkerville) today said in an interview that "the public meetings have been getting larger all the time and I think the momentum is going to keep building up."

The committee has about 20 more cities on its itinerary, including the province of Quebec, which could really turn the heat on the politicians between now and the Victoria meeting.

During its western swing, the committee drew 4,200 people to its hearings in British Columbia and Southern Alberta.

Impact on French-Canadians

The size and tolerance of the western turnouts dumbfounded many politicians. It had a major impact on French-Canadians and may well have made it possible for Premier Bourassa to accept an amending formula and the projected outline of a constitution as "feasible approaches."

The parliamentary committee's turnouts during its Quebec hearings this spring may turn out to be as crucial as the western swing in revealing even in French-Canada a strengthening demand for achieving a constitution which would bolster Bourassa's position for actually signing an agreement in Victoria.

Trudeau, pointing out that the committee had uncovered a stronger public feeling than anyone had been aware of, said the committee's continuing hearings would be watched with interest.

"I think the conclusions reached at the federal-provincial conference yesterday are useful not only in that they probably will be the basis for ultimate agreement on a constitution by the governments but also because they create a pause between the governments," MacGuigan said.

"We will be able to take a reading of public opinion on these proposals as we go throughout the country and we already have had them printed in our minutes last night so that they will be available to all those who participate in our hearings."

Bennett Pleased

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett is pleased with the results of Ottawa's two-day constitutional conference.

On his return to British Columbia late Tuesday, the premier told newsmen at Vancouver International Airport that the new formula to amend the constitution gives this province a key position "with just about the same powers as Quebec and Ontario when it comes to approving any changes."

STILL TEETERING is part of the second and third floors of the Veterans' Hospital in Sylmar, a Los Angeles suburb, after the devastating earthquake Tuesday. Probers today are still digging into the debris in search of buried patients. (AP Wirephoto.)

Fear of New Tremors Grips Shattered City

LOS ANGELES — The death toll climbed to 44 today from the earthquake that has left the population of the third-largest city in the United States frightened of new tremors.

More than 1,000 were injured as a result of the rumbling quake that struck at 6:01 a.m. PST Tuesday and the hundreds of aftershocks.

Officials said 25 persons were missing, some buried in the rubble of two collapsed buildings at a Veterans Administrations hospital in the hard-hit west end of the populous San Fernando Valley.

It was too early to give a full damage estimate, but it will run in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Twenty-five bodies had been found in the hospital wreckage; 45 persons were rescued. One hundred persons were injured.

So heavy and so interlocked were huge chunks of concrete from the virtually levelled three-storey structures that rescuers said it might be another day or more before all victims could be reached.

HEAR CRIES FOR HELP

Although cries of "Help me! Help me!" could be heard Tuesday night, authorities said there was little likelihood of more survivors being found. The bodies of five persons were extricated in the night and early morning hours.

Some 400,000 Canadians who emigrated to California live in the populous Los Angeles area.

The panic and confusion and the many fires that broke out when gas mains were fractures, led to nine deaths due to heart attacks.

President Nixon declared the quake-stricken scene a disaster area, making it eligible for government help, including low-interest loans to rebuild.

National Guard troops moved into the ghost towns to prevent looting.

The main shock Tuesday was centred 26 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

It crumpled much of the concrete facing the 150-foot-high dam of Van Norman Lakes, the city's largest reservoir, and cracked its

Ky Threatens Thrust Into North Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — Two thousand more South Vietnamese troops crossed into Laos today, and Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky threatened a drive into North Vietnam.

U.S. and South Vietnamese helicopters lifted the fresh Saigon troops across the border, raising the number in southern Laos to more than 10,000, field reports said.

Vietnam Press, the Saigon government's news agency, quoted Ky as saying that if necessary South Vietnamese forces may cross the 17th parallel into North Vietnam to flush out supply bases in the area.

Informed sources said several battalions of the South Vietnamese force that pushed into Laos Monday had advanced along east-west Route 9 to areas north and south of Sepone, a main North Vietnamese trans-shipment point and base area on the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The town 25 miles from the South Vietnamese border has been reported virtually deserted, and there were no immediate reports of any fighting there. The aim of the operation is to choke off the North Vietnamese troops and supplies moving down the network of jungle trails to South Vietnam and Cambodia.

NEW CLEAN-AIR BILL PROVIDES STIFF FINES

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Fines of up to $200,000 for industries found guilty of air pollution are provided for in a proposed clean air act given first reading Tuesday in the Commons.

The legislation makes the elimination of air pollution and preservation of clean air a top priority in the soon-to-be-established department of the environment.

Forestry Minister Jack Davis, who is to be in charge of the new department, said air pollution costs in Canada —including health, housing and building maintenance, laundry and cleaning costs— now amounts to $1.5 billion a year.

Under the bill, the federal government would be empowered to:

—Set national air quality objectives;

—Set national emission standards where there is a significant danger to health or where international agreements on air pollution are involved;

Penalties for infringing the emission standards would be as high as $200,000. Fines of up to $5,000 daily are provided for producing or importing prohibited fuels.

Federal plants would become models to follow in the fight against air pollution, Mr. Davis pledged at a news conference following the bill's introduction.

Provinces already had accepted in principle the need for national air quality objectives.

Hydro Cuts Bus Service

Details to Reveal New Philosophy

Cutbacks in bus schedules in Victoria and Vancouver are expected to be announced later this week.

Details of schedule proposals are being withheld by B.C. Hydro until the crown corporation advises municipal councils.

Hydro's board of directors are scheduled to meet Feb. 22 to consider an increase in fares. The last increase, to 25 cents from 20 cents, was in the spring of 1970.

Gordon Shrum, Hydro chairman, said Tuesday the schedule alterations would involve a "fundamental change in our philosophy" about urban transportation.

He said the transit system was losing $4.4 million prior to wage increases for transit division workers who settled for a 14¾ per cent pay raise over 27 months after a 32-day strike.

Shrum declined to elaborate on what the changes might entail until after municipal councils have been told. Hydro will announce the changes through newspaper advertising.

The B.C. government pays a $2 million subsidy to Hydro, leaving the corporation to offset the remaining deficit from other resources.

Transit loss on Vancouver Island has been $1 million and would be $2 million after the settlement, Shrum said.

★ ★ ★

Capital Regional District chairman Hugh Curtis said today cutbacks would not be an effective way of off-setting increased transit losses.

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford were not available for comment this morning.

"It sounds very much like the CPR," Curtis said.

"It's costing too much therefore we're going to cut back. But cutbacks in schedules don't seem to be the answer."

He said decreasing frequency of bus traffic would only drive still more people away from the transit service, decreasing fare revenues and driving up subsidies.

★ ★ ★

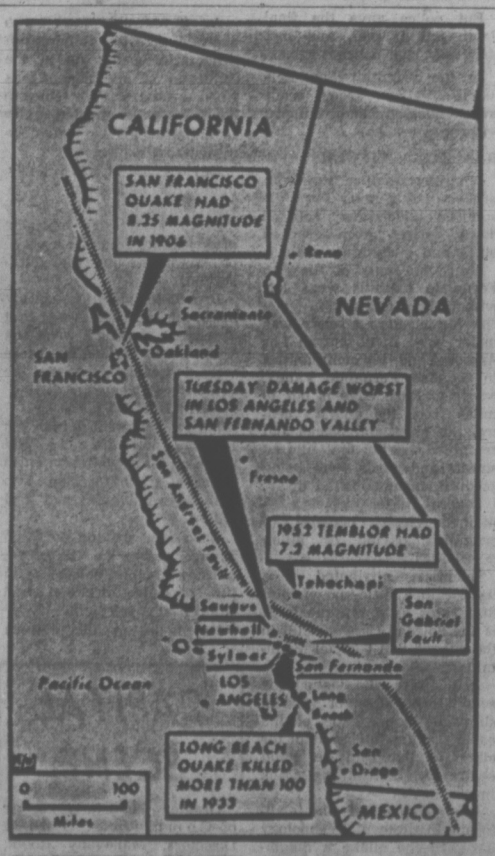

Passengers who already have to wait "30 minutes to an hour" for buses will rely on alternative modes of transportation if schedule cutbacks cause even more inconvenience, Curtis said.

"Therefore less people will use the bus and subsidies will have to increase."

He said he was no expert in public transit and did not know what the ultimate solution to transportation problems would be.

"This is just another little scene in a continuing play," he said.

Hydro deficits in transit operation are expected to top $8 million a year by 1973 unless changes are made.

CALIFORNIA QUAKES over the years are compared in this map which pinpoints such previous disasters as the 1906 San Francisco tremblor, the 1933 upheaval in Long Beach which killed more than 100 people and Tuesday's quake which was centred in a fault in the San Gabriel Mountains near Los Angeles. (AP Newsmap.)

OVERLOAD BUSES END —HYDRO

A B.C. Hydro spokesman in Victoria said today "a number" of overload buses on various routes have been discontinued since the transit strike ended last Saturday.

No details were given.

One of the buses ran to Oak Bay Junior and Secondary High Schools twice a day.

It was patronized chiefly by students from the Cadboro Bay-Ten Mile Point area attending Oak Bay Junior and Senior Secondary Schools. It did not follow the regular Cadboro Bay bus route.

Parents in the area are reportedly upset by the fact that students now are forced to ride into the centre of town and make a transfer there, adding up to half an hour to the trip both going to school and coming home.

The B.C. Hydro spokesman said an overload bus is one which runs in addition to regular buses to absorb extra passengers.

DNA Inhibits Cancer Cells In Animals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Malignant cancer cells in laboratory rats have been restored to normal and future cancer growth inhibited, three scientists at the University of California at Los Angeles report.

Key to the finding, based on 10 years of research and experiments, was DNA, molecules in the cell which transmit genetic characteristics in the body.

The scientists said they isolated DNA molecules from the breast cancer of a rat and then incubated this DNA with live cancer cells. These cells were injected into rats and failed to produce cancer, the group said.

Dr. Richard M. Halpern; his wife, Dr. Barbara Halpern and Dr. Roberts A. Smith of the UCLA Molecular Biology Institute made the report in the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, a journal.

"We want to emphasize that all our experiments and findings so far apply only to laboratory animals and not necessarily to humans," they said.

Loffmark Rebuffs Makaroff

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark this morning refused to listen to convicted Vancouver abortionist Dr. Robert Markaroff when he came with a delegation of the Vancouver Women's Liberation Alliance for a meeting in the executive council chamber.

Loffmark, however, did accept a brief on abortions from the women's liberation group.

"Would I be out of place to ask . . ." Makaroff said during a discussion of the seven recommendations outlined in the brief.

"Yes, you would be out of place," Loffmark replied when he was told the speaker was Makaroff.

LOST HIS LICENCE

Loffmark said he was not prepared to hear Makaroff because he received no prior notice that the physician, who has lost his licence to practice medicine in B.C., would attend the meeting.

The brief recommended:

- The B.C. government immediately approve additional facilities for the performing of abortions and a publicly-financed system of clinics to provide freely available abortions, birth control information and devices, pregnancy testing, maternity care and sterilization.
- The B.C. government recommend to the College of Physicians and Surgeons that Makaroff have his licence reinstated.
- Every accredited hospital be obliged to establish an abortion committee, and that all publicly-financed hospitals make abortion facilities available.
- The B.C. Government pressure the Canadian government to provide funds for research into a "100 per cent safe" method of birth control.
- Permanent birth control information clinics for rural areas, and wider publication of abortion and birth control facilities available in B.C.

Loffmark accepted the brief but remained non-committal about any future government action.

Shadow Mischief

Wallace Wants Oufall Issue Considered

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark was asked in the legislature Tuesday to take a second look at his "unjustified" refusal to consider extension of the Clover Point sewage outfall without a primary treatment plant there.

Scott Wallace (SC — Oak Bay) said common sense would suggest that the Clover Point outfall, which would have to be extended in any case if primary treatment were included, should be extended first on a trial basis. He said studies suggest that "an extended deep outfall with comminution" would be sufficient for Clover Point and that the high costs of primary treatment should be avoided if possible when more pressing problems could better use the money.

$1 MILLION COST

Victoria would have to acquire 20 acres of land — 70 residential lots — at a $1 million cost and a loss of $30,000 tax revenue annually for a primary treatment plant, he said. The plant itself would cost $5 million and another $500,000 annually to operate.

When the View Royal area has "open ditches filled with sewage," it seems "incomprehensible" that Victoria should be asked to spend so much money, perhaps unnecessarily, Wallace said.

Loffmark has stood by a 1969 provincial policy which bans extension of the Clover Point outfall without primary treatment. An extension of Macaulay Point outfall was later allowed on a trial basis.

BNA Act Getting Closer to Home

OTTAWA (CP) — The outline of a new constitution has been accepted as feasible by the 10 premiers after a two-day conference here. Prime Minister Trudeau said the conference marked "a substantial breakthrough" in the march to patriate the British North America Act.

The framework etched in the statement would:

- Provide an amending formula by which six of the 10 provinces, plus Ottawa, might make constitutional changes. Approval of the British Parliament would no longer be required.
- Entrench fundamental rights, including elections "at least every five years," in the constitution.
- Give English and French constitutional protection as official languages. Still under discussion is a way to extend this right to education.
- Make the Supreme Court of Canada a child of the constitution rather than Parliament, making it rather than Parliament "the court of final appeal."

Key aspect is the amending formula, sought off and on for nearly 50 years.

If the formula is endorsed at the June meeting in Victoria, Parliament and the legislatures would then be asked to approve it.

Once they did, the stage would be set to ask the British Parliament to recognize a proclamation giving Canada absolute control over its constitution for the first time.

The proposed formula would require consent for constitutional changes from the federal government, Quebec and Ontario, two western provinces representing 50 per cent of the West's population, and two of the four Atlantic provinces.

Quebec and Ontario would be automatically included under a provision that would give any province with 25 per cent of the population veto power. This might someday include growing British Columbia.

The conference statement said reduction of regional disparities should be referred to in the preamble and body of a new constitution.

The amending formula would require the assent of Ottawa and six provinces for constitutional change on general division of powers.

As well, a majority would be required before allowing an amendment concerning the Queen, the Governor-General, the lieutenant-governors, the need for annual sessions, and maximum periods between elections.

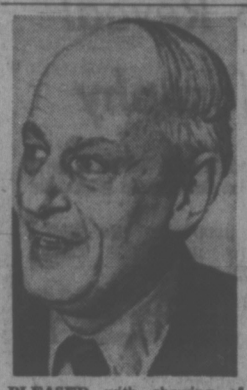

A move was afoot in Quebec during the late 1960s to abolish the role of the lieutenant-governor there.

Another provision would remove the need for a majority vote on an amendment where it was strictly a matter between the federal Parliament and a single province or specific provinces. An example would be a change in the terms of union under which Newfoundland entered Confederation.

The section on linguistic rights would give an individual the constitutional right to have English or French as his main language of instruction in areas where the population justified it.

The conference statement was vague on details in this area, admitting that further study was needed. Quebec lodged a general reservation "pending an examination of all its implications."

PLEASED with showing of his Parti Quebecois in Chambly byelection Monday is Rene Levesque who called obtaining 33 per cent of vote "a triumph." Winning Liberal Labor Minister Jean Cornoyer obtained virtually all the rest of the votes except for a handful distributed among four other candidates.

Bourassa Guarded But Likes Proposal

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Robert Bourassa said the constitution amending proposal is "a considerable improvement" over the Fulton-Favreau formula accepted in 1964 by government leaders but rejected by Quebec a year later.

Because the Fulton-Favreau formula didn't give Quebec veto power and required approval of all provinces for amendments on federal-provincial divisions of powers, Quebec nationalists described it as "a constitutional dog-collar" and forced its rejection.

Bourassa, anticipating a fight at home, was guarded. He said his province might accept the furmula.

WIDE RANGE

Other premiers ranged from reluctant to enthusiastic in acceptance of the formula.

Ontario's John Robarts, who provided the initial thrust for the current round of talks, said his last conference made "substantial progress."

"What we have to do now is hammer it out in the kind of language acceptable in a formal document," said Mr. Robarts, who retires this month as premier.

Nova Scotia's Gerald Regan, attending his first conference, was among the enthusiasts.

"While it may appear somewhat cumbersome, it really reflects what Canada is all about," he said of the regional aspects of the amending formula.

Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba was an enthusiast and Premier Ross Thatcher of Saskatchewan gave the formula grudging acceptance.

The initial impetus of the conference Monday towards agreement on the formula faltered slightly as Quebec put forward income security proposals.

Premier Thatcher said the proposals might "wreck the federal system." However Prime Minister Trudeau and other premiers felt they could be met.

The conference statement quoted Ottawa as saying that the Quebec proposals on family allowances, old age pensions, income supplements and the Quebec and Canada pension plans are "very similar" to federal plans in these areas.

New Brunswick's Richard Hatfield, another newcomer to the conference, appeared intrigued by the Quebec proposals. The money would come from the federal government, but there would be increase provincial jurisdiction.

"More input at the ground level," Premier Hatfield said with interest. But he considered it essential that Ottawa retain sufficient power to aid needy regions.

. . . QUAKE

main structure of earth fill.

As water experts began draining it, police ordered a forced evacuation Tuesday night of some 100,000 persons in a 20-square-mile area of the San Fernando Valley. Officials said that barring a strong new after-shock, the dam should hold.

LOSS IN MILLIONS

Hundreds of commercial buildings and factories were damaged, along with uncounted homes, highways, bridges and public buildings. Los Angeles Country estimated loss to its buildings alone of $125 million, with 427 damaged structurally and 42 evacuated.

Gov. Ronald Reagan surveyed the damage and said: "It's shocking. When you look at this you feel pretty helpless."

The quake was centred near the town of Newhall, 35 miles to the northwest, but the northwest corner of San Fernando Valley — part of the Los Angeles area — was the worst hit.

The freeway leading from San Fernando to Newhall looked as if it had been chopped with a giant axe and hit with a sledgehammer.

ROADS SHREDDED

Newhall, with a population of 7,000, suffered extensive property damage but few casualties. Police reported every house had windows out and merchants boarded up their smashed store fronts. Police said the paving on the town's roads was shredded up in ribbon-like strips.

But police gave the final death toll as one, and said that was from a heart attack.

In the worst-hit San Fernando Valley area, roads were buckled and chipped with deep cracks.

GAS SMELL LINGERS

A strong smell of gas from broken mains hung over the suburbs and water coursed down gutters from cracked pipes and swimming pools.

Many residents of the San Fernando foothills were left without light and gas.

A big cleanup already was under way. In downtown Los Angeles and in communities in the San Fernando Valley, whose western edge is but 10 miles from the quake's centre, the glass and bricks and crumbled mortar that littered streets and yards were being scooped up and carted away.

Several major freeways remained closed because of crumpled paving or fallen overpasses.

Scientists attributed the tremor to a little-known fault that rates as a pipsqueak. It is the Soledad Canyon fault in the rugged San Gabriel Mountains.

A scientist who visited the scene found signs of vertical slippage — one side of the earth fracture higher than the other — but said he could easily step across the crack in the earth.

Seismologists at the California Institute of Technology assigned the quake a magnitude of 6.6 on the open-ended Richter scale, which rates major ones at 7 or more. This made it comparable to the 1933 shock in nearby Long Beach that killed 115 persons and caused $40 million damage.

PM Won't Give Up Payments

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Wednesday the federal government will not give up its right to make direct payments—such as unemployment insurance benefits and family allowances—to all citizens of Canada.

He said in the Commons, however, that Ottawa wants to see federal jurisdiction co-ordinated in the best way possible with provincial social security policies.

In the coming months, discussions would be carried on with the provinces on how federal and provincial security systems can be co-ordinated.

Replying to Gilbert Rondeau, Creditiste House leader, the prime minister said each province is free to have its own social security system.

But the federal government held that it was entitled to make direct payments to citizens. Ottawa could not give up this right.

Mr. Rondeau had asked whether Ottawa will make money available to the provinces for such programs as family allowances, now paid directly by the federal authority to families.

Police Were Doped —Impaired Driver

A 48-year-old man who accused arresting city police officers of being under the influence of marijuana was fined a total of $475 today in court when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving and driving without a licence.

David L. Laws, 728 Hillside, made his accusation as he was pulled from his car by officers early this morning after leading police in a chase on streets around the police station.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said the accused was first observed driving west on View about 12:45 a.m. There were no headlights on and the vehicle was weaving.

ILLEGAL TURNS

Police followed him on Douglas and after he had made an illegal left turn on to Johnson tried to stop him with their red lights and loud hailer.

Laws kept driving north on Broad, east on Pandora, missing another car going in the opposite direction and stopped at a red light.

He made an illegal turn north on to Douglas from Pandora, ignored a call on the police hailer and was finally stopped at the red light at Douglas and Fisgard.

He had to be forcibly removed from his car and kicked and hit the officers in the process.

"What can I say?" Laws said, replying to a question from Judge William Ostler before sentence.

Ostler fined the man $450 for the impaired offence and $25 for no licence and suspended him from driving for five months.

* * *

A 15-year-old boy was sentenced in adult court to six months definite and six months indeterminate in jail Tuesday.

The boys was raised from juvenile court last week and pleaded guilty to breaking and entering and theft.

The offence involved a Saanich home from which $41 was taken from a cashbox.

Two young men were charged Tuesday with escaping William Head minimum security prison and being unlawfully at large.

Harry Roy Cook, 21, and Michael Lorne Gwilt, 22, were serving five-uear sentences. Cook was to be released in 1973 and Gwilt in 1974.

Gwilt was recaptured by Warden Gamaliel Milner in a Colwood area store about two hours after he disappeared from the prison Monday.

Cook was picked up by Colwood RCMP officers Tuesday about 10:30 a.m. on Rocky Pointe Road after he went missing from William Head about midnight Monday.

LOFFMARK

'. . . if there is any real inefficiency in hospitals the first people to call to account are the doctors.'

Loffmark Stands Fast On Doctor Criticism

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark, refused to apologize Tuesday for what Dr. Scott Wallace (SC—Oak Bay) described as a "widespread, diffuse, blunderbuss" attack on doctors.

Wallace called for the apology in the legislature Tuesday night after Loffmark had earlier described doctors as the "worst offenders" in hospital inefficiency.

The Oak Bay MLA said Loffmark had used information from a Royal Jubilee Hospital utilization study which was carried out only after the minister had promised that the study would never be used for "cheap, political gain."

Loffmark told reporters he wouldn't apologize because his information did not come from the study in question "and to the best of my understanding I did not do what Dr. Wallace suggests I did."

COST HIGH

The minister conceded that Wallace was correct in saying that only a few doctors abuse their hospital privileges, but he insisted the costs of that abuse are high.

Speaking during the budget debate at the opening of the afternoon sitting Loffmark had cited thre examples of hospital inefficiency blamed on doctors:

● A teenage girl who spent 10 days in hospital before even being examined, a case later described as a "mistake" by a doctor. At $60 a day cost, it was "a $600 mistake," Loffmark said.

● A patient who could have been discharged on a Friday stayed in hospital until a Monday, the reason being that the doctor in the case had been playing golf.

● A Vancouver professor who spent 13 months in Vancouver General Hospital psychiatric ward, sleeping there at night while working full-time at his job during the day.

Loffmark said doctors are the "worst offenders in respect of hospital utilization" and "if there is any real inefficiency in hospitals the first people to call to account are the doctors."

About the professor who spent 13 months as a nights-

only patient in the Vancouver hospital, Loffmark exclaimed: "Would you believe it? . . . It's a fact!"

The minister warned that a "very, very high degree of efficiency" will be needed if B.C. hospitals are to avoid the "calamitous experience" of U.S. hospitals because of accelerating costs.

"They (abuses) are as significant in dollar value as what Dr. Loffmark is asking for in an increased per diem rate . . ." Loffmark said later about the minority of doctors which he emphasized were the object of his attack.

RATE INCREASE

Wallace has called for an increase in the per diem hospital insurance rate paid by patients from $1 to $5 a day, an increase of about $16 million annually.

If the patients are to pay more as Wallace asks, said Loffmark, then "the public should know where the money is going . . . and it's going to a few doctors who are abusing their privileges."

Wallace said in the House that Loffmark had given assurance on three separate occasions to the executive director of Royal Jubilee Hospital that a hospitalization study by Dr. David Longridge would never be used for "cheap political gain."

The outspoken Oak Bay MLA called for the apology to doctors citing a matter of "honor" as a reason for his request.

The minister grinned and thumped his desk along with other MLAs in the traditional wind-up to speeches in the budget debate, but shortly after convened a press conference to deny that he had referred to the Longridge report or to Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Loffmark said two of the three incidents cited were in Vancouver and the third, the case of the golfing doctor, had not been associated by him with the Victoria hospital.

AMPLE ACCESS

Loffmark said his department had conducted studies and his powers as minister would give him ample access to the same kinds of information as was contained in the Longridge report.

Wallace said later, however, that the Longridge report was the only study on hospital use in sufficient depth which has been done and which would enable Loffmark to make his charges about doctors' use of hospitals.

Loffmark said he had promised not to make that report public and had honored his promise.

In the legislature, Wallace said Loffmark had "grossly exaggerated" the degree to which abuses by doctors occur and pointed to the improved record of hospital use being achieved in Victoria with co-operation of doctors.

Wallace also criticized Loffmark's rejection of his suggested increase in the $1 a day charge on hospital users. Loffmark said it would simply put more load on patients without the federal government paying its 50 per cent share of the extra revenue.

"I would submit the government would be acting in a much more logical fashion if the $1 a day charge were abolished," Wallace said, pointing out it would mean that Ottawa would have to provide an extra $2 million along with the provincial government.

Wallace said he "wan't entirely joking" in making the remark.

Loffmark later indicated seriously that he personally might favor eliminating the $1 a day charge but some of his cabinet colleagues didn't favor the move.

Wallace Urges Elimination Of Profit-Making Hospitals

Dr. Scott Wallace (SC — Oak Bay) Tuesday cited the "defiant attitude" of the president of the national company that owns the Sandringham private hospital as evidence that the provincial government should put an end to profit-making hospitals and rest homes.

Referring to the strike of employees at the hospital owned by National Nursing Homes Ltd., Wallace said:

"The president, Mr. Neil Cook, in a telephone conversation told me clearly that he would rather close the hospital down than come to any contract agreement with the union.

"I do not regard this as the attitude of a responsible citizen, in whose hands rests the responsibility for the proper and efficient care of elderly, sick people.

"This dogmatic refusal to recognize that other hospitals in British Columbia afford their staffs the benefit of a contract with job security . . . reveals a distressing lack of social awareness," Wallace said.

The MLA, who wants the government to encourage non-profit organizations to provide nursing home service under a government-supported program, said Cook's "defiant attitude" could work only to the detriment of "the poor patient."

He referred to reports of an "excellent" earnings outlook for National Nursing Homes Ltd., and also to the value to the patient of having continuity of care that comes from a low turnover of adequately paid staff, under a good union contract.

He appealed to Labor Minister Leslie Peterson to intervene in the strike in an effort to find a settlement, but suggested the government also take action to eliminate the profit motive from hospital care.

Psychiatrist Queries Aptitude Test Value

The validity of an aptitude test to be given Greater Victoria Grade 9 students later this month, and the expenses involved were questioned by a psychiatrist at a Greater Victoria school board meeting Tuesday.

Trustee Philip Ney said the Kuder and other aptitude tests, which are to be administered by the development, personnel and research department of the school board, are under fire.

"In my opinion it has less validity than the IQ tests," said Ney.

Curriculum director John Wiens agreed with Ney.

He said there had been a tendency in the past to place too much reliance in too many kinds of tests of questionable validity and reliability.

"I would be very upset if someone took the results of these tests and said 'hey, kid, this says you should become such and such,'" said Wiens.

Trustee Dr. Victor Rogers felt that the whole question is beyond the capabilities of trustees to rule on.

But Ney said he had some expertise in the field which he wanted to use to warn trustees about the type of thing being done.

"I am aware of the fact that money is being spent here and it may be being spent uselessley," said Ney. "I am sitting here as a board member and I object to being snowed."

"Whichever department is trying to sell this program to the board should be able to put a price tag on it and say for this amount you get this value. You can't do this."

Agreement on How to Agree

DESPITE LAST-MINUTE PRESsure by Quebec for increased jurisdiction over welfare services within that province, it appears that this week's federal-provincial meeting in Ottawa was able to achieve what previous gatherings were unable to do. The delegates reached agreement on the wording of a formula for amendment of Canada's constitution when it comes under Canadian — rather than United Kingdom — control.

The effect of this, if successfully negotiated through Parliament and the provincial Legislatures, will be that Canada will gain the power to revise its constitution without reference to the Parliament at Westminster. The British North America Act, which serves as Canada's constitution, is an act of the British Parliament and hence can be amended only by that body. Although on occasion changes have been made — quickly and without debate — when Canada has requested them, it is anomalous that a country of Canada's size and standing should not have domestic control of such a document. Exercise of that control has not been delayed by Britain, but by Canadian inability to agree on the means by which the constitution would be brought to Canada, and how it would be amended when it got here.

Now the method has been agreed on: changes must be ratified by the federal Parliament and by any province having 25 per cent of the total population, which means Ontario and Quebec, in addition to two Atlantic provinces (exclusive of Prince Edward Island), and two western provinces. Ontario and Quebec will thus hold veto power among the provinces, but a strong Western or Atlantic opinion which bound most of the provinces in either region could also exert a veto. And, of course, no amendment could carry without an affirmative vote in the federal Parliament. Changes of limited application would require less wide agreement.

Although this seems a simple and obvious solution, it has been impossible to achieve it until now, and even today Quebec has sought an eleventh hour bargain by introducing the welfare control angle. The whole concept, of course, must still be approved by the federal and provincial law-making bodies, but observers believe that at this point such approval will be forthcoming.

The ability to make amendments will not necessarily mean that amendments will be easily made. There will be wide and heated differences of opinion on any alterations to the provisions of the BNA Act which, with Supreme Court interpretations, has governed the country for 104 years. Apart from the merits of specific changes which may be urged, there is a basic divergence of opinion on the desirable nature of a constitution's provisions. One school holds that every reasonable contingency should be provided for in such a basic document; the other believes that generalities and over-all principles — such as those under which we have survived so far — make a more workable constitution.

Our national race must yet be run, but at least we have laid out the racecourse — something we had heretofore been unable to do.

Industrial Acquaintance

TRADE DESERVES ITS RECOGnition as a principal agent in fostering good relations between countries, but in the contemporary world another catalyst has appeared which not only complements trade but may overshadow it in the binding process which ensues. Such a new development can be seen clearly in the recent "industrial pact" which was signed in Moscow on January 27 between Canada and the Soviet Union.

Upon his return to Ottawa the Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, Mr. Jean-Luc Pepin, who headed the Canadian delegation to Moscow, spoke of the objective of the agreement to encourage Russian-Canadian cooperation in the field of "industrial science and technology." He went on to outline the working groups which would be set up to implement the agreement.

Such practical arrangements between two countries which share so much in common by reason of their common northern geography and natural resources should do more than bring about an increase in the trade statistics of both countries; they could foster a common approach to common problems in the scientific and technological fields. In a very real sense the new pact is a form of cultural exchange and it will operate on a level which overrides ideological differences.

The technical or commercial category in which the pact falls officially should not mislead us. The spirit of the agreement should bring about co-operation between the two countries on the theoretical frontiers of science and technology as well as in the fields of practical application. Such arrangements between the Soviet Union and Western countries could encourage the growth of liberalism, the political concomitant of science, in the Soviet Union.

While Canadians should see the agreement in the perspective of existing bodies for scientific exchange, such as the International Council of Scientific Unions, it is likely that Mr. Pepin was thinking of the broad implications of the pact when he said so circumspectly that it "might lead to all kinds of joint ventures."

Pioneers Pro Tem

LIKE THE VAUDEVILLE JUGgler who deliberately drops a plate now and then just to show that his act isn't really as easy as he makes it appear, the United States astronauts of the Apollo 14 mission to the moon overcame a number of technical hitches which proved that success could be achieved even though some factors were not smoothly 100 per cent perfect.

The balky docking mechanism, the maverick warning signal — such incidents proved the mettle of man when his machines betray him, and they emerged not as real defects in the triumphal mission but merely demonstrations of the capability of human courage and training.

The world today salutes a momentous feat, which is no less momentous because it repeated previous exploits, no less memorable though it will in turn become a step toward further triumphs. The list of pioneering space-men is growing. At some imperceptible point soon we will stop calling them pioneers — then we will truly have entered the space age.

FROM WINNIPEG — By JAMES H. GRAY

Test Case for Municipal Amalgamation

YOU can say this for the government of Premier Ed Schreyer, it is developing a pronounced addiction for "knock-'em-down and drag-'em-out" political brawling. The latest example is its challenge to the entire political leadership of a dozen municipalities which make up Greater Winnipeg. Its new reorganizational plan for the area is also being hurled into the teeth of all the indignant taxpayers in the area, and they run into the tens of thousands.

Gray

Last winter the government took on the vocal and angry organized insurance agents and fought them to a hair-line decision over the take-over of automobile insurance. Then it took on the gigantic Northern Manitoba pulp and paper industry that got into default on its interest. The brawl in Greater Winnipeg will out-decibel them all.

Greater Winnipeg is Canada's most fouled up and complicatedly overgoverned community. This city of under 500,000 is cut up into a dozen antonomous municipalities. Each has its own police department, fire department, school boards, engineer, elected council and mayor.

Though each bubbles with civic pride, there is no way in which a wayfaring stranger can tell one from another. The only one with a trace of individuality is St. Boniface, which has some French street signs. But because few of them have comparable services, most have lower residential taxation than Winnipeg city.

Tax Rate Problem

It is this lower tax rate which has stymied every effort in the last 40 years to bring some order into Winnipeg chaos. Three years ago the government set up a commission to find a solution for the Winnipeg problem. Its report last summer opted mainly for the status quo with the odd token type union of small units.

The Schreyer government threw that report out the window. It came up with its own plan: Total amalgamation of all the Greater Winnipeg municipalities into a single city. It would be run by a city council of 48 members. That would be a body almost as big as the 57 seat provincial legislature.

The aldermen on the new council would represent roughly the same districts and people they now represent on their municipal council though the smaller units would be abolished. It would work out to about one alderman to 10,000 population.

The plan has naturally drawn the angry reaction of most of the suburbs though Winnipeg proper is in favor if it. During the next six weeks the Schreyer cabinet is mounting a monster campaign to sell the plan to the opposition. It is launching a series of public meetings in all the suburbs to explain the plan and try to water down opposition.

Both the Schreyer ministers and the local politicians face the same problem —the plan will mean a whopping increase in taxes in most of the suburbs. Most of the residents of Greater Winnipeg work in Winnipeg proper. However, most of the commercial and industrial expansion in the last decade has occurred in the suburbs. Neither the suburban business nor suburban residents contribute anything much toward the operating costs of Winnipeg.

Lower suburban taxation and tracts of available land have attracted industry and residential construction to the suburbs. Winnipeg, however, has had to maintain a metropolitan type of police and fire service while the municipalities have gone along with rudimentary protection. But recent growth in crime over the entire area has indicated that better policing is essential. A similar condition applies to fire and other services.

Instead of doing a piece-meal job, department by department, the government decided to embrace the one-city concept of complete unification save for education.

So far the opposition of the suburban politicians has been louder and angrier than that of the taxpayers. At meetings with the politicos, the government has got nothing but lumps. But at public meetings with electors the ministers seem to have been faring much better.

St. Boniface Restraint

In St. Boniface, with its large French Canadian minority, opposition to being swallowed up the Winnipeg melting pot might have been expected to have been extreme. Instead it was surprisingly restrained and reasonable. The message is being carried into all corners of the area by Cabinet spokesmen during the next two months. Then the government intends to proceed with its legislation.

There has been a great deal of interest in the west in the city-state concept in which the expanding cities would ultimately replace the provinces as the dominant government. Winnipeg's new 48-man council will indeed approach the Provincial Government in size if not importance. From this test-tube may emerge some practical ideas of how such city-states could fit into provincial organization.

Letters

Yacht Club Anchorage

The Oak Bay council is to be congratulated on its decision not to oppose a breakwater at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, in spite of opposition from local residents. The council could hardly do anything else but allow the yachting fraternity to spend its private money in furtherance of their sport when the municipality is proposing to spend taxpayers' money on a sports pavilion estimated at $130,000 and a recreation centre for $200,000 regardless of any objections which might be made.

Some months back the RVYC applied for permission to float yachts in Loon Bay and a public meeting was held at which I spoke strongly in favor. A lawyer hired by a handful of local residents had his day and what might have been a beautiful asset was lost. Now instead, those same objectors may have to look at a pile of rough-hewn lumber and maybe they will accustom themselves to it and reflect.—Clarence Goode.

Death of a Dog

Some time ago we had an unfortunate and tragic experience. We know it has happened to others and for some reason no one seems to be able to do anything to prevent it happening again and again.

Leaving the East Coast in 1969 we brought with us our female collie, Jane. On Aug. 22, 1970, we had an appointment to have her bathed and combed. I picked her up from the appointment, and, noticing an injury on her back, was informed that she had been injured while being combed. The attendant then proceeded to put some kind of ointment on Jane's back. On Monday, Aug. 24, I phoned the SPCA and inquired if they had ever had any complaints and they replied a few. Upon their request I brought the dog so they could see her and upon examining her said it looked like a burn and they would investigate. I then contacted the Better Business Bureau and once again was advised that they too had previous complaints and would look into our case. (We are still waiting to hear from both offices.)

On Aug. 29, I brought Jane to the veterinarian to have the ointment removed from her back, still believing the injury was from being combed. Some time after leaving her I received a phone call telling me the dog must undergo emergency surgery as gangrene had developed in her back. This operation lasted three hours and despite the marvellous care given her by our veterinarian she died on Sept. 8.

We along with our neighbors know that Jane was perfectly healthy when taken for the appointment. Nothing can bring Jane back but, still more tragic, there is no law that can prevent incompetent people advertising. We should know. We answered their advertisement. If this letter can prevent our heartbreaking experience to just one animal-owner we feel Jane's death will not have been in vain.—M, J. F. McArdle, 852 Reed.

FROM LONDON — By DAVID HUMPHREYS

As Canada Scans the Indian Ocean

THE Canadian government's attitude toward collective security, it seems, is something like the little boy looking through the telescope from the wrong end: the farther away the object is, the less important it is. This emerged in one of those little asides, overshadowed by the rush of urgent events, during the Commonwealth conference at Singapore. Another was the role played before, during and after those crisis days by the masterful Canadian diplomat Arnold Smith, the always positive and constructive secretary-general.

Humphreys

Both may be considerable factors in the Commonwealth's immediate future. Canada is the leading candidate to chair the eight-nation study group charged with examining the security of maritime trade routes in the Indian and South Atlantic oceans. Mr. Smith is charged with making the study operational and has already undertaken to make it a serious and effective proposition.

What then, it was asked in Singapore, is the Canadian position on the security of the Indian ocean? The answer was essentially not to have a policy. The Indian Ocean is a long way away, after all. And the withdrawal of Canadian forces from Europe was already putting into practice the policy that our security effort must be concentrated closer to home. Even Europe was quite a distance away.

Did any other countries hold to this position? Why of course, Jamaica, too, was a long, long way away. But Canada is the larger power. Mr. Trudeau won his spurs as a mediator at Singapore. And with a policy of studied disinterest, Canada awaits the call for yet another and more formidable rescue operation.

The eight nations in the study break down into alignments roughly in groups of two. India and Malaysia, closest to the action, as it were, wish that all foreign power would just go away and leave them and their ocean in peace and neutrality. The only trouble with that position is that it won't happen. Britain and Australia are concerned about the trade routes. Britain believes the build-up in Soviet naval strength is a serious problem. Australia tends to agree. Britain has already files of supporting information. Continued cool and restraint by the British members will be necessary to conceal an attitude quite widespread here that the committee is an exercise in educating some of the others.

Nigeria-Kenya Stand

Nigeria and Kenya, while moderate Africans, are nevertheless committed wholeheartedly to the view that whatever the perils of the seas the solution does not lie in Anglo-South African defence co-operation. This leaves Canada, Jamaica and Mr. Smith to sort things out.

There is no suggestion of detracting from the real achievemehts Mr. Trudeau and others have already made in commonwealth diplomacy by pointing out the significance of what is happening. For the Canadian attitude in the Far East is a radical departure from the established Canadian western collective security position. It is a logical extension of the thinking which led us to halve our contribution to NATO.

The foreign policy white paper of the Pacific area announced that Canadian policy for the region rested upon the maintenance of peace and stability, leaving open the means to that end. Even as the chairman Canada will likely have to resolve this open-endedness before the study group reports in six months.

For a start, the committee is merely a device to buy time. In this respect it is significant that before anyone went to Singapore Mr. Smith's strategy was to put the South African arms dispute in a longer time frame. That this has happened must be a considerable victory for him as well as for Mr. Trudeau, or Mr. Heath. But what then?

The committee must decide whether Britain is right in her concern. If so, there are three apparent options. One is for Britain to do all the patrolling herself. This is the East African solution but one which Britain finds financially and morally unacceptable.

Variations

A second is some variation of Simonstown base, with Britain if not selling arms, at least lending them or otherwise supervising the operation in co-operation with and including use of South African facilities. The third is some alternate solution which Britain still fails to see.

Mauritius, in the heart of the Indian Ocean, offered itself as an alternative to Simonstown. But the British saw themselves alone financing and running the base. Asked if Canada had been approached by Mauritius, a Canadian spokesman replied negatively. This may have been technically correct. Yet a member of the Mauritius delegation made it clear to an independent party that the conception of its proposal was such that Canada could, if so inclined, join in the co-operative effort.

What then is our policy? Was Mr. Trudeau's remark about pulling the plug in the Indian Ocean for all he cared, off-hand or more serious? The study at hand is not to examine the scenario of race relations in southern Africa at which Mr. Trudeau has proven so adept. There may still be a role in separating the race syndrome from the question of maritime security. But that won't be enough. And at this admittedly early stage it is difficult to foresee any proposal for a solution in which members do not declare themselves one way or the other on the central British contention.

It really will not do in 1971 to talk about areas being a long way away. They are also in that 19th century concept far away from Britain. But this is the age of the global village, isn't it?

DENNIS THE MENACE

Looking Back

From the Times of Feb. 10, 1911:

"I beg to recommend that no further effort be made in the legislative assembly to oppose the passage of the bill, and that, seeing that our water is so impure as not to be fit to drunk by the inhabitants of Oak Bay, the water be immediately turned off at the Oak Bay mains, and hereafter the city refuse to supply them with water."

The drastic action proposed by the city solicitor was decided upon at last evening's meeting of the city council.

The Mid-Life Crisis Of Artistic Genius

By THOMAS WISEMAN
The Manchester Guardian

By tradition — and out of a kind of fear — the nature of artistic creativity is usually kept dark. When genius flows there is a marked preference for not revealing its sources; at best, a degree of grace exists in the artist which enables him to acknowlege his gifts as God-given; whereas in states or arrogance he belives he has done it all on his own.

While inspiration lasts there is a tendency to take it for granted. It is regarded as a sort of natural right, and endless, granted to the artist in perpetuity.

For some it is only when imspiration fails that its former richness is recognized. Then come the substitutes, drugs and stimulants and magical devices, the changing of wives, the trips, the pilgrimages to ego, the money grubbing, sometimes decline and disintegration and madness, sometimes death.

Sudden Failure

This has been such a frequent fate of the once inspired artist that the question has arisen whether it can be accounted for entirely in terms of personal circumstances, or whether there might not be another factor operating. In this often-seen pattern of the sudden failure of inspiration, followed by the decline of the artist, is there to be found a general condition, a universal hazard? And, if so, what is it that strikes at artists of the richest gifts?

This question has been investigated by Professor Elliott Jaques, who is head of the school of social sciences at Brunel University, and an original thinker on such matters as the nature of work and how it can be fairly rewarded. He has just published a book, "Work, Creativity, Social Justice," in which one paper deals with the question of the artist's mid-life crisis.

Between 35 and 39

Jaques postulates a sort of artist's climax occurring between the ages of 35 and 39; a do-or-die period. In taking a random sample of 310 painters, composers, poets, writers and sculptors of undoubted greatness or genius he discovered that the death rate showed a sudden jump between 35 and 39, at which period it is much above the normal death rate. Those who died between these ages included Mozart, Raphael, Chopin, Rimbaud, Purcell, Baudelaire, and Watteau.

There was then a big drop in the death rate between 40 and 44, followed by a return to the normal death rate pattern in the late forties. "The closer one keeps to genius in the sample," writes Jaques "the more striking and clear cut is the spiking of the deathrate in middle life."

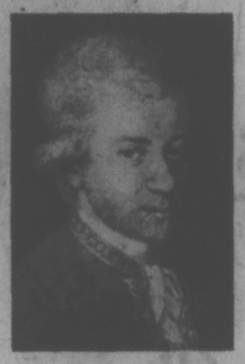

Out of this almost accidental observation he came to formulate the concept of the mid-life crisis. In looking into the lives of major artists Jaques found evidence in many cases of a critical and decisive change of life occurring in their middle to late thirties.

These changes were of such a drastic nature — death in some cases — that a period of violent upheaval seemed to be suggested. Where the changes were for the better they were of such a profound nature as to indicate some major crisis having been survived.

Silence, Seclusion

Jaques cites instances of major midlife changes in the lives of artists. Bach was mainly an organist until at the age of 38 he began his great achievements as a composer; almost the reverse seems to have happened in the case of Rossini — his achievements were mostly before the age of 40, and thereafter he remained comparatively silent until his death at 74, dividing his life into two distinct parts — swift triumph, followed by the long years of silence and seclusion.

Racine had 13 years of continuous success, climaxed by "Phedre" at the age of 38; for about 12 years after that he produced nothing. Ben Jonson had done all his major work by the age of 43, and added little to his achievements in the remaining 20 or more years of his life.

Goethe underwent a profound inner change between the ages of 37 and 39, associated with his journeyings through Italy. He regarded this as the climax of his life, the time when he was granted an understanding of his mission.

Michelangelo produced a series of masterpieces by the time he was 40; his David was finished at 29, the Roof of the Sistine Chapel at 37, and his Moses between 37 and 40. Little is known of any artistic work that he may have done during the next 15 years of his life. There would appear to have been a creative hiatus until 55, when he began work on the great Medici monument and later in the "Last Judgment" and frescoes in the Pauline Chapel.

Jaques cites these instances to support his contention of a major crisis point in the middle of life, and it is his theory that those who do not meet and overcome the particular challenge of this period, decline or die.

Why a crisis point at this particular time? Because it is the mid-point of life, when the individual has a deep physiological awareness of having reached the halfway point of his life span. In high youth, and in that fervor of creativity that is predominantly lyrical and dionysian, death is characteristically vanquished in a series of false victories.

The poet, drunk with his own powers, re-orders the universe, changing everything that is not to his liking. In the intoxication of his talents—which at this stage he thinks of as his, rather than as given, he believes everything to be possible. Freud has said: "Nobody believes in his own death . . . in the unconscious everyone is convinced of his own immortality."

The kind of imagination that will not countenance what is not to its taste was described by Shelley's wife, writing of the poet: "(He believed) . . . God made earth and man perfect, till by his fall 'brought death into the world and all our woe.' Shelley believed that mankind had only to will that there should be no evil in the world and there would be none."

Denial of Reality

Jaques observes that it is at the time of the mid-life crisis that such denial of reality, characteristic of youthful idealism, breaks down. An awareness begins to intrude that the high pulse beat of creativity cannot be kept up. The defiant racing of time is not endurable.

Keats, living on spiritual capital turning every experience instantly into poetry, wished to compose "without fever," but did not know how. It was only feverish composition that he knew—the kind that defies reality.

Jaques contrasts this type of hot-from-the-fire creativity, intense, spontaneous and ready-made—typically represented by Mozart, Keats, Shelley, Rimbaud, all of whom died in the mid-life crisis—with what he calls the "sculpted creativity" that can come after the artist has successfully passed through his climacteric.

Sudden Bursts

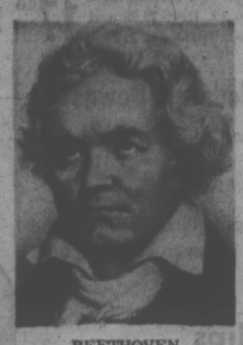

This other form of creativity he describes in these terms: "The inspiration itself may come more slowly. Even if there are sudden bursts of inspiration, they are only the beginning of the work process. The initial inspiration must first be externalized in its elemental state. Then begins the process of forming and fashioning the external product, by means of working and reworking the externalized material."

This is how Beethoven worked, lacking Mozart's magic flow, constantly, laboriously reworking and reworking his compositions, nothing coming easily, to which the mass of endlessly rewritten and corrected music scores bear evidence.

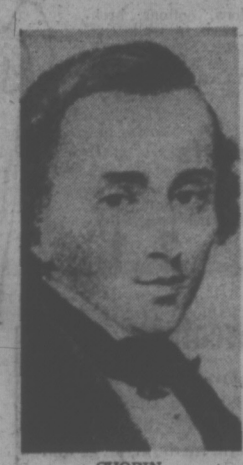

What the mid-life crisis seems to be essentially about is whether the artist can accept the reality of his eventual death, or must maintain to the last the delusion of immortality that is so dear to the poetic imagination.

SHELLEY

BEETHOVEN

"Sculpted creativity," according to Jaques, can arise only when "death and human destructiveness—that is to say, both death and the death instinct—are taken into account (then) the quality and content of creativity change to the tragic, reflective and philosophical."

Though Jaques is formulating a concept in terms of the newest ideas about the mind, he claims no newness in an absolute sense. Indeed, he quotes as the perfect description of the onset of the mid-life crisis the opening of Dante's "The Divine Comedy."

"In the middle of the journey of our life, I came to myself within a dark wood where the straight way was lost. Ah, how hard it is to tell of that wood, savage and harsh and dense, the thought of which renews my fear."

Dante eventually arrives at Paradiso, and this would be Jaque's idea of the successful resolution of the artist's mid-life crisis. Dante put it like this: "But now my desire and will, like a wheel that spins with even motion, were revolved by the love that moves the sun and other stars."

'We Must Look at Whole Question'

By PIERRE TRUDEAU

(From a transcript of the prime minister's press conference in Singapore at the conclusion of the recent Commonwealth conference.)

As I see it the issue of whether to sell or not to sell (arms) is a relatively secondary one.

The British make certain arguments saying that they should do it, the others make certain arguments saying that they shouldn't do it, and both advance legal, moral, economic, strategic and political arguments. And, you know, we make them back and forth.

But the position I've been trying to press on some of my colleagues is that the immediate issue can only be understood if it's placed in a scenario of the future of Africa.

In other words, if, to ensure the security of the sea lanes, we take steps against communism, we encourage the British to take steps which make the assurance of communist penetration of Africa even greater, then we have perhaps not gained much.

And therefore, we must look not only at the problem of security of the ocean, but the whole question of racial relations in Africa. And if while we are arguing this short-term immediate question, we permit circumstances to develop which could end up that in ten years more or less we have another Vietnam on our hands, we have another mid-East situation on our hands, then not only will that be disastrous for Africa, but I submit it will be disastrous for the world. A bloody racial war in Africa could leave nobody unconcerned.

We saw that even the Vietnam war has divided not only the U.S.A. but many other western nations, between themselves, amongst themselves, and inside of themselves. Even the question of Nigeria, you will recall a year and a half, two years ago in Canada, the question of Nigeria and those who supported Biafra concerned Canadians very deeply and divided us amongst ourselves.

So, if we set up the circumstances where a racial war in Africa, black against white, is even more probable, then we will have done a very poor service to posterity, to say nothing about the moral indignity, the moral abomination, of racial discrimination which debases not only the states who practise it but those individuals who have it in their hearts.

It poisons the relations between human beings. It makes peace in the world a less possible matter, a less possible eventuality. So, it's this kind of thing that I say we've been trying to impress on everyone the whole long-term scenario. And I've enjoined everyone to not just talk about the short-term but the long-term scenario as he sees it.

●

In other words, it isn't just enough for Britain to say, "Well, we must make shipping safer on the oceans." He must say how the total racial problem in South Africa develops according to his view of the future and how his present action can be justified in the light of his total commitment to peace.

And I said the same thing to President Kaunda and President Obote. If is not sufficient to tell Britain not to sell arms to South Africa lest that cause a racial war, because what will your position be if Britain does not sell arms to South Africa — does the right thing by you?

Will this be the end of the matter? What is your scenario for the future? If Britain should make that decision, what will you say about France and Italy and those other countries? And even if those countries do not sell, what then will you say about Portugal?

Will you guarantee that if these countries don't sell arms to South Africa we will not have racial war in South Africa, that you will go on record as being against such a war? Probably not. You will also want the Portuguese to get out of Angola and Mozambique.

And what will your position then be on the presence of Portugal in NATO? And what will your position be on the mere trading with South Africa by all nations, which you say now is all right? But are you going to say this forever or are you going to say at some point, well you are strengthening the motives for an eventual civil war there?

●

And what if none of this happens? What if none of us co-operate in any way with South Africa? South Africa still remains the strongest military power by far south of the Sahara and will remain such, especially if you add it on to Rhodesia, for a long while to come.

So what if all the western nations behave well, are you going to say then there will be no racial war? And if there is a racial war won't you still blame the white nations or the western nations for being the cause of it? And even if you don't, what about the communists, what about the freedom fighters, who's going to arm them?

It's unlikely, I said, that Canada would ever want to arm freedom fighters though we might respect the justice of their cause. So who is going to arm them? If it is the Communists from some part of the world, aren't they going to get the credit for being on the side of the Africans, or the black Africans?

You know, what is the total picture; where do you want it all to end; how do you see a racial war being avoided in South Africa?

In other words, you are just asking the British to take the first step but you're not telling them or us or any of us what the next steps are.

Bully-Boy Style

By ALUN CHALFONT
New Statesman

If taking on 30 Commonwealth leaders singlehanded and dismissing their preoccupations as part of a gigantic farce can be regarded as a notable diplomatic triumph, then Mr. Heath must be well pleased with his recent performance in Singapore.

But when the shrill cries of admiration have died down and the euphoric glow brought about by thumping conference tables has subsided, the state of the Commonwealth will be seen to be substantially more precarious than it was before Mr. Heath set off on his missionary voyage.

Of course it must have been tiresome for the British delegation to be debarred from the serious business of educating the Black Commonwealth and drafting anodyne communiques; all those Africans behaved appallingly.

Indeed, British officials found it positively incomprehensible that so much time should have been spent on the South African arms issue. "They seem to think," said one languid proconsul on his return to familiar, reassuring London, "that it was a matter of life and death."

■

Well, I have news for Mr. Heath and his crew. This is precisely what it is — not only in the literal sense for Africans, who tend on the whole to live and die in Africa, sometimes violently; but in a more symbolic sense for the people of Britain, because the approach of Mr. Heath to the Commonwealth is the barometer of the whole climate of Conservative foreign policy.

The Prime Minister has valiantly defended the right of every Commonwealth country to act according to its perception of its own national interests.

If that was all he went for, he might as well have stayed at home boning up on Palmerston, whose bully-boy style in foreign policy he seems to admire.

Because that particular matter has not been at issue for some time. It was Mr. Wilson, after all, who reminded the Commonwealth that Britain too had achieved independence.

What is much more important is how that independence is used and how those national interests are interpreted.

It is not a matter of surprise when Conservatives apply to domestic issues the uncomplicated criterion of 'what's in it for us'; that, after all, is the slogan of a free-market economic system. If it is now to be the test of our foreign policy as well, the outlook for Britain as any kind of effective civilization force in world affairs is a miserable one.

Just Putting 'Bi and Bi' Into Action

By GILLES BOYER
Quebec Le Soleil

The storm which developed in the Commons over a confidential report suggesting the hiring of 250 young French-Canadian university graduates by the federal public service was raised with no valid objective. . . .

What the report recommends, in fact, is no more than the application of the recommendations of the Laurendeau - Dunton - Gagnon report. There is no question at all of unjustified preferences for an ethnic group (French Canadians) but rather of a desirable equilibrium of Canadians expressing themselves in our two official languages at the level of the federal public service.

Certainly it would be embarrassing to see the federal government apply itself to favoring a particular ethnic group on a racial basis. That is the bias for which the Conservatives and New Democrats criticized the Trudeau government. But in acting in that way, the Opposition sees the question from a biased angle. . . .

The royal commission report on bilingualism and biculturalism drew attention to a gap at the higher levels in noting that French-speaking officials in Ottawa made up only 22 per cent against 26 per cent of the working population in 1961 while the proportion of English-speaking officials rose to 69 per cent.

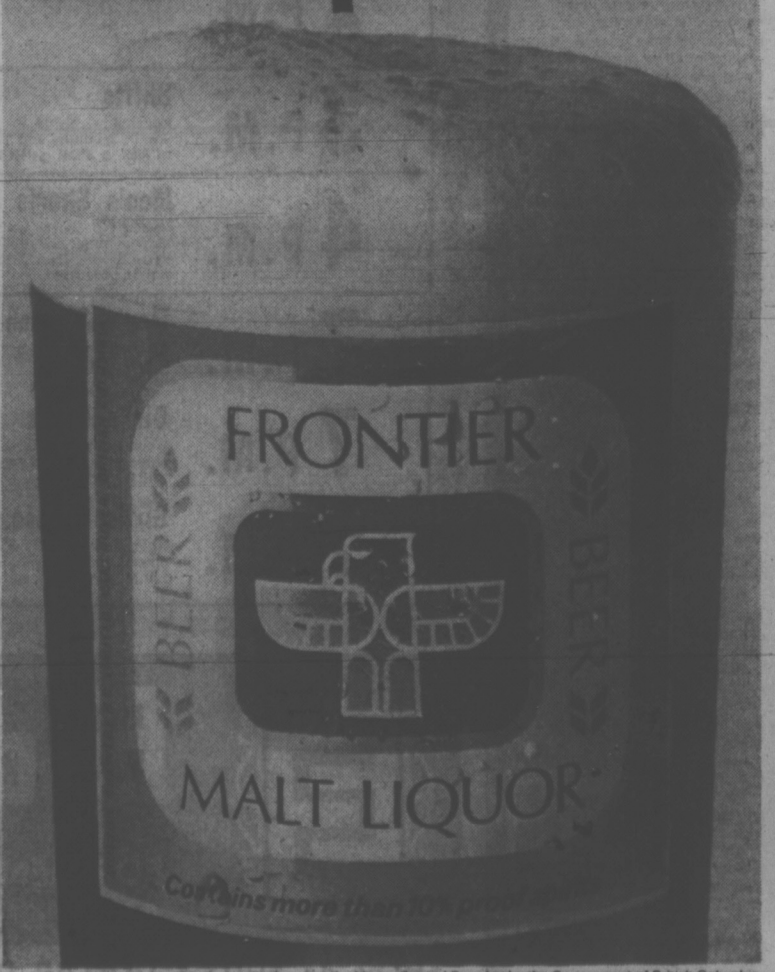

★

It is necessary to ensure that French-speaking persons do not limit themselves to Quebec in a sort of ghetto or particular status, but really participate in the national life, playing the role the country may expect of them. To achieve this, it is important that special efforts be made to draw French-speaking university graduates to the national capital.

If there were any question of giving privileges to a particular ethnic group, the opposition would be right to rebel against this way of acting. All policies of a "racial" nature would be deplorable in this country.

But that is not the question. On the contrary, it is aimed at ending a privileged situation until now favoring the English-speaking group, often arising from the fault of the French-speaking people who huddled snugly in Quebec. Nothing could be worse . . . than to pit one cultural group against the other.

The New Generation Gap

By ART STOTT

The young architects and builders, one girl and three boys, seemed to range down from age 10. Appropriately, in the era of women's lib, the young lady assumed executive authority. In an earlier time, she might have appeared a bit bossy. By today's standards she was merely efficient and competent in decision making. The small group labored, as hundreds have labored before, on the construction of a driftwood hut at Gonzales Bay, above high tide.

"No," she declared imperiously as two boys struggled a slab into the upper wall, where it protruded into the doorway, "take that out. It's gotta be neat. That spoils it. Get another hunk." The boys did her bidding.

★ ★ ★

They worked through the sunny afternoon and eventually had their shelter almost completed. It needed a patch on the roof and they took off like a flock of birds for a corner of the beach where they'd kept a piece of old plywood in reserve. Together they tugged it toward the construction site, hurrying because they sensed the passage of time.

The lady architect and chief contractor raised her voice to shout at a bearded young man plodding along the beach with another bearded youth and a long-haired girl: "Hey, kid, what time is it?" The bearded young man, perhaps feeling the dignity of his age, ignored the first high-piping query. It was repeated: "Hey, kid, what time is it" and then as an afterthought, "please." The reply came in guttural, "Four-fifteen," plus a small, unnecessary, expletive.

★ ★ ★

"Hurry" said the lady architect, "we gotta finish." And they looked toward the nearly completed structure only to see another bearded youth and his long-haired young lady entering the doorway. The builders dropped their plywood and zeroed in on the hut, shouting "Get outa there. Get outa there." The intruding pair emerged from the doorway.

"Say," queried one of the small boys in a voice of amazement, "are you hippies?" He repeated his question in a tone that might have been reserved in a less considerate century for lepers.

The bearded youth and his young lady acknowledged the designation with short, embarrassed laughs and the construction crew chorused its earlier command: "Get outa there. Get outa there."

An old beachcomber, resting from his labors with a small Swede bucksaw, noted the reaction of the very young and wondered if this were an indication of the next generation gap. If, indeed, the older young people ordered from the shelter were hippies, then it seemed that the next age below them was involved in its own process of rejection also. The small fry had no time for hippies and no desire whatever to provide a shelter for them.

★ ★ ★

To the old beachcomber, it seemed possible that trends had come full cycle back to his own boyhood. The structures he and his gang created at the age of the new hut builders were different in design, fashioned on the dugouts of trench warfare. These he and his fellows had defended against marauders, while marauding themselves and destroying dugouts of the enemy. Eventually all forts were destroyed in the fortunes of war which nobody won.

There was a small benefit from the destruction: it left the ground and material available for new, improved construction and helped pass a long day in play.

The young architects and contractors may not have recognized that point, nor even been aware of the building an earlier generation had undertaken on the same shifting sands. At all events, they objected to intrusion by young people five or 10 years their senior. As much by tone of voice as by choice of words they made their position clear.

The old beachcomber turned back to his sawing, scarcely noticing how much tougher wood is to saw nowadays as he speculated on the inevitability of change, the waning of the hippie, this small example of repudiation by the new young and wondered where the small people were headed.

★ ★ ★

Would they find anything of value in the bequests of the withering flower people? Would they swing back to the squares of a previous generation? What would they fashion of the years ahead of them? At least as they played on the beach, they were building. Possibly they'll keep right on doing that.

Sedition Charges Questioned

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet will rule Friday on motions to quash charges of seditious conspiracy against five Quebecers.

The latest of the motions was presented in court Tuesday by teacher Charles Gagnon, one of the five being tried on the charge of seditiously conspiring to overthrow the Canadian and Quebec governments by force.

Gagnon contended the charge does not specify the crime he committed and therefore should be dismissed.

Lawyer Robert Lemieux, labor leader Michel Chartrand, author Pierre Vallieres and Jacques Larue-Langlois, a broadcasting producer, are being tried with Gagnon on the seditious conspiracy charge.

SAYS CHARGE CLEAR

Prosecutor Gabriel Lapointe told the court Tuesday that the charge is clear and legal. Furthermore, he said, the motion "is premature."

He also disputed the contention of the accused that they were illegally detained and illegally arraigned on the charge which is laid under the Criminal Code.

Government decree of the War Measures Act, a contested point, is "conclusive proof" of the validity of the act and the charges that flow from it, Mr. Lapointe added.

Lemieux and Vallieres presented motions Monday to have the charges quashed.

The conspiracy allegedly took place between Jan. 1, 1968, and Oct. 16, 1970, the day the War Measures Act was invoked by the federal government.

Seditious conspiracy is punishable by up to 14 years in prison. All five men are also charged with being members of the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec which carries a penalty of five years imprisonment or a $5,000 fine or both.

Gagnon, a former sociology lecturer at the University of Montreal, said Canadian jurisprudence has established that charges must include "time, place and matter."

"The accused, according to the Criminal Code, cannot be accused of a type of crime."

Judge Seeks Counsel For Rose

MONTREAL (CP) — Mr. Justice Marcel Nichols said Tuesday he has asked the Quebec Bar Association to send an observer to the kidnap-murder trial of Paul Rose, who has been banished from the court for the duration of his trial.

Mr. Justice Nichols said he asked the president of the bar association to delegate "an observer who would act as a friend of the court and would have the right to intercede" on the behalf of the accused who has refused to appoint a lawyer of his own.

In Ottawa, federal legal officers said Tuesday that Mr. Justice Nichols may himself end up acting in effect as counsel for Rose, one of four men charged with the October abduction and murder of Pierre Laporte, former Quebec labor minister.

The law officers said that if Rose by misconduct has deliberately chosen to be barred from his trial, then he has forfeited his right to present his defence.

However, they added that the courts will do their utmost to make sure that trials related to the outlawed Front de Liberation du Quebec are as fair as possible.

This could mean that the judge will end up acting in effect as counsel for the defence.

TURNED DOWN CHANCE

Rose was banished from his trial Monday and was offered a chance to get back in Tuesday but turned it down.

Mr. Justice Nichols told Rose he would be readmitted if he was ready to amend his behavior and apologize to the court for his insults.

Rose was sent out of the court again when he accused the judge of discriminating against him.

Before he left, the accused said he wanted to withdraw the mandate of Pierre Cloutier, who had been acting as his legal adviser.

Mr. Justice Nichols agreed to the request.

Mr. Cloutier had asked permission to withdraw from the case after Rose was expelled from court Monday. He was asked to return Tuesday for the judge's decision but did not appear.

The trial is still in the stage of selecting a 12-man jury to judge Rose, a former teacher. Only nine jurors have been chosen so far.

Saanich Faces 6-Month Delay Over Outfall

Saanich municipality can proceed with sewer construction in the Grandview area of Gordon Head — but the sewers can't be hooked to the Finnerty Cove marine outfall at this time.

This news was given to public works committee Tuesday night by engineer Neville Life, who also said there is provisional approval for sewers on the east slope of Gordon Head plus the Swan Lake trunk line, costing $1.4 million.

The provisional approval enables Saanich to make financial arrangements for the sewers.

The first contract to be let will be in the Grandview area, said Life. This would be followed soon by the area to the east.

He also said that Saanich has been "verbally advised" that the provincial health branch has registered an objection to the municipal application to amend the discharge permit to increase the flow by one-third to handle increased sewering.

"It is indicated that the Pollution Control Branch would prefer not to have to carry any further processing of our application," he said.

SIX-MONTH DELAY

"Since this could add six months or more to the time we require to place the system in service, the regional board's staff will be approached as soon as possible to see if steps can be taken which will persuade the Pollution Control Board to authorize the requested increase in the rate of discharge."

Explaining the possible six months delay, Life said later the extra discharge would be an amendment to the existing permit for the outfall. If this was done, the regional district could proceed with its trunk sewers now.

'DON'T KNOW'

"If we don't know where we are going it might be six months — they might say you can't hook up until there is a treatment plant," he said.

Asked when the outfall becomes a regional district responsibility, Life said the permit expires this summer and the regional district would apply for renewal.

The existing outfall at Finnerty Cove extends 1,300 feet into the sea, discharging comminuted and chlorinated sewage at a depth of 44 feet. It was built in 1961.

The outfall does not have a sewage treatment plant, although land has been reserved in case one is required.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark has repeatedly stated that all future increases in sewage discharge must be accompanied by firm plans to build primary treatment plants.

EXCEPTION

An exception was Macaulay Point, Esquimalt, where the Capital Regional District has built a 6,100-foot outfall which should be operational in a few months.

The permit for Macaulay Point, however, is for a trial period, subject to it meeting certain standards. A monitoring program on water quality is already under way and land has been reserved in case a treatment plant is required.

Life told the committee that the Finnerty Cove outfall already meets the minimum standards set by provincial authorities for the new Macaulay Point outfall.

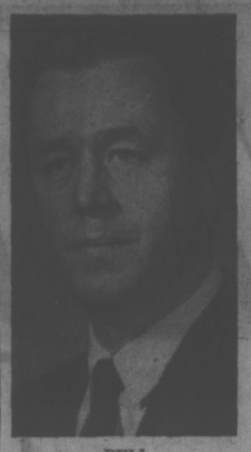

Life concluded his report on Gordon Head sewers by saying completion of works on the east slope is "somewhat delayed. It appears that completion during the summer is the best that can be expected."

900 CONNECTIONS

On the western side of Saanich, which will hook into the Macaulay Point system, Life said 66,000 feet of trunk line and lateral pipes and 900 house connections have been built. A large part of this will go into effect when regional work is completed.

In other business, public works committee:

- Recommended that $9,000 be spent to cut back rock in six locations between the vocational school and Quayle Road on Interurban Road to three feet from the pavement;
- Raised no objection to Durrance Road Elementary, in Saanich, connecting to the Central Saanich water system, on the understanding this is without precedent;
- Endorsed in principle a model building bylaw in British Columbia;
- Asked committee chairman Ald. William Campbell and Life to pare the $93,725 proposed sidewalk construction program this year to the $50,000 provided in the provisional budget.

Mercury Contamination May Force People to Become Vegetarians: Bell

Everyone may have to become vegetarians in the future if pollution of meat and fish with mercury and DDT continues, University of Victoria ecologist Dr. Marc Bell said Tuesday.

These compounds are accumulative, which means that a fish or animal retains in its body flesh nearly all the mercury or DDT that was in small species or plants that it ate during its life. Vegetables do not accumulate such concentrations, which are often dangerously high.

"Vegetables are definitely safer to eat than meat or fish," he said.

LOWER LEVELS

Bell called for the federal government to set lower tolerance levels (the amount of concentration deemed acceptable) for mercury in food.

The present tolerance level set by Ottawa is 5 parts per million.

It is set low enough to avoid lethal effects, he said.

But it does not take into account long-term sub-lethal effects, such as genetic damage which, while not immediately apparent, will show up in future generations. Other sub-lethal effects include behavior damage and impaired reproduction.

"The present tolerance levels are inadequate to protect us "from the long-term damage that can come from the input of these compounds into our individual body systems — or into the world's eco-system as a whole," he said.

Bell was commenting on a talk given at University of Victoria by Dr. Michael Waldichuk, director of the Pacific Environmental Research Institute in North Vancouver.

Waldichuk said the Canadian-American tolerance level for mercury "could be decreased" but that he personally felt it is more than adequate.

CONCERNED

Waldichuk, too, was concerned about the long-term effects of mercury, but said the present tolerance level is adequate for protection from immediate damage.

"If someone ate four pounds of fish a day at 5 p.m. he would begin to show neurological (brain damage) symptoms in about a year."

However, he admitted that the Canadian-American safety level is 10 times as high as the level adopted by the United Nations, and said that there has been "much concern" among scientists over whether the .5 level is really safe for long-term purposes.

43 KILLED

Bell pointed to the alarming findings of the Japanese scientists who gathered evidence from the mercury contamination of Minimata Bay, which is known to have killed 43 people.

They found that the water in the bay contained less than one — and often as little as 1 part per billion of mercury — yet the fish themselves contained up to 50 parts per million.

The fish had concentrated the mercury by 50,000 to 500,000 times.

This happens because they are high in the food chain, he said.

"One fish might consume, say, five million small fish in his life. And each of those small fish has consumed billions of smaller sea organisms."

Since mercury is accumulative, all the mercury in those countless smaller fish and organisms is still in the bodies of the bigger fish that man eats.

The same kind of tremendous concentration of other accumulative dangerous substances, like DDT and the hydrocarbons, occurs in animal flesh, Bell said, particularly in the fat.

So now's a good time to start getting used to the idea of being a vegetarian.

Riding Ring May Be Built For Centennial

Construction of a public riding ring as a Centennial project was discussed at the Garden City Horsemen's Club annual meeting recently.

Officers for this year are Brian Martin, president; Murray Saunders, vice-president; Mrs. S. Watt, secretary; Heather MacDonald, treasurer and Roy Jewell, Ken Evans, Barry Bissenden and Norman Caldwell, directors.

Plans are under way for the annual four-day 100-mile ride in the Shawnigan area and also for an additional Centennial ride in the Princeton area.

Life without doubt

Do you ever doubt the sun will rise in the morning?

Even if rain or fog hide its rays, you know it's still there. You don't doubt this because you are familiar with the laws governing the earth's relationship to the sun.

In the same way, each of us could eliminate much fear and doubt from our lives if we understood the laws governing man's relationship to God.

Hear James Pike, of The Christian Science Board of Lectureship, tell how effectively people have been able to act, even in a grave crisis, by listening to God's direction.

Consolidated

A larger net loss despite greater revenue is reported for 1970 operations by Consolidated East Crest Oil Co. Ltd.

The company, with mineral interests in B.C., Saskatchewan and Northwest Territories, had revenue totalling $166,432, up from $158,990. Expenses rose from $109,068 to $136,066, and deductions for depletion, depreciation and abandonments were $71,000 higher at $173,700.

Year-end deficit rose from $779,935 to $901,151, but working capital deficiency was reduced from $144,135 to $88,149.

Home Oil

Home Oil Co. Ltd. had operating profits of $4 million or 58 cents a share during 1970 compared with $5 million or 73 cents a share in 1969, the drop due to an extra $2.3 million provision for depletion.

The company also had an extraordinary gain of $1.39 million during 1970 from the sale of securities.

The earnings were on a gross revenue of $30 million, the highest in the company's history and an increase of 8.3 per cent from 1969.

Athabasca

Athabasca Columbia Resources Ltd. of Calgary has acquired coal and base metal mining interests from TVI Mining Ltd., also of Calgary, in exchange for 25,000 treasury shares.

The agreement gives Athabasca Columbia a 50 per cent stake in 13 separate prospects valued at $75,000.

Included are three coking coal properties in west-central Alberta, one near Kakwa River in the northwest part of the province and one southwest of Calgary.

Four of the base metal properties are in northern Saskatchewan and four are in B.C.

Ventures

Royal Canadian Ventures Ltd. earned less and reported a deficit during 1970.

The company, with metallic mineral, coal and petroleum interests in western Canada, had income of $83,698, compared with $84,955 in 1969, and also added about $29,000 in expenses for a total $149,382, or an operating loss of $65,684, up $29,900.

Net loss was $31,000 vs. a profit of $115,900 the year before, but year-end deficit rose from $555,246 to $586,265 and working capital at the end of the year fell another $14,679 to $246,681.

Banff Oil

Trading in the shares of Banff Oil Ltd. will cease at Toronto and American stock exchanges Feb. 24, followed by the immediate issue of Aquitaine Co. of Canada Ltd. shares to those Banff shareholders who have transmitted their stock.

Shareholders approved the liquidation of Banff Oil and a favorable tax ruling was handed down for the transaction, involving the exchange of 52 Aquitaine for each 100 Banff shares.

Chrysler

Chrysler Corp. reports it lost $7.6 million in 1970, down from a profit of $99 million in 1969.

The loss was equivalent to 16 cents a share, compared with earnings of $2.08 a share in 1969.

Chrysler's worldwide sales last year totalled $7 billion, down slightly from $7.1 billion in the previous year.

High Savings Rate Must Be Stimulated

MONTREAL (CP) — Anthony R. Hicks, president of the Sun Life Assurance Co. of Canada, told the company's 100th annual meeting Tuesday that a high rate of savings is the best defence against inflation.

"It is only through a high rate of savings that we can maintain real economic growth, a satisfactory level of employment and provide the productive strength needed to tackle such problems as environmental decay, and inquality of opportunity."

The chief responsibility of North American governments at present is to create a tax environment that stimulates higher rate of private savings and this requires a major shift in tax policy, he added.

"We must move away from policies that penalize saving."

Hicks said that at the end of 1970 total life insurance in force was $18,960,723,000, with 60 per cent of this in Canada, 25 per cent in the United States and 15 per cent in Britain and other countries.

The assets of the company at the end of 1970 amounted to $3,662,245,000, an increase of $146 million during the year.

McDonald's In Takeover Of B.C. Firm

TORONTO (CP) — McDonald's Corp. of Chicago, a restaurant chain, announced Tuesday the acquisition of McCan Franchises, Ltd. of Vancouver as a wholly-owned subsidiary.

The company said the 28 McDonald's restaurants across Western Canada owned by McCan will be merged with McDonald's Restaurants of Ontario Ltd. to form a cross-Canada hamburger chain of 51 restaurants.

The president of McDonald's Ontario, George Cohon of Toronto, is to head the merged company.

McDonald's Ontario, also a wholly-owned snbsidary of McDonald's Corp., owns 23 restaurants, some of them in New Brunswick.

McDonald's Corp. and George Tidball, former president of McCan, are forming T-Mac Resources Ltd., to seek new business opportunities in the Canadian market.

Canadian Reserve Sells Stock

CALGARY (CP) — Canadian Reserve Oil and Gas Ltd., a subsidiary of Reserve Oil and Gas Co., Los Angeles, has completed sale to a brokerage house of $6.5 million worth of common stock.

Canadian Reserve has 9,516,226 shares outstanding and 89.5 per cent of the total — all but one million shares being sold in Canada — are owned by the United States parent.

Paul D. Meadows said applications have been made to list Canadian Reserve on the Toronto and Montreal stock exchanges and delist the parent company stock, presently listed on the Toronto exchange.

Meadows said the offering of stock in Canadian Reserve was made to provide equity participation in Canada, since the company operates only in Canada. He said proceeds will be retained entirely within the Canadian company.

Meadows also announced that the company has begun its winter drilling program and that a contract has been awarded for construction of a gas plant in the South Lone Pine Creek oil field in Saskatchewan.

Canadian Reserve will own a one-third interest in the plant, designed to process 30 million cubic feet of gas a day.

Deliveries form the plant are scheduled to begin Nov. 1.

Treatment Plant For Angeles Mill

PORT ANGELES, (AP) — Crown Zellerback Corp. says it expects to complete a $3 million water treatment system to clean liquid wastes by midyear at its pulp mill here.

The firm said the system would remove settleable solids from mill effluent before discharge through a deep outfall line into the Strait of Juan de Fuca.

MONUMENT IN DESERT is this turbine deck of giant Hanford, Wash., nuclear steam plant. The $90 million plant, of which $80 million remains to be paid, was completed in 1966. It is without steam because of the U.S. government's decision to shut down N reactor which supplies steam to operate plant. It is eight storeys high but only 57 feet extends above ground. It has three basement levels and is too football fields long. It can generate 800,000 kilowatts. The N reactor and steam plant represented the only dual purpose reactor complex in the Western world. Procedural Snarls at Gas Hearing

OTTAWA (CP) — The case of Edgerton Rae's acquittal for horse theft figured prominently Tuesday when the National Energy Board opened a landmark hearing on the prices Canadians should pay for natural gas.

The horse-theft case, cited in a vain bid to adjourn the gas rates hearing indefinitely, was among a succession of legal and procedural snarls that showed the gas hearing will be long and bitterly fought.

Three dozen lawyers were in full cry when Trans-Canada Pipe Lines Ltd. of Toronto formally launched its request for federal authority to raise charges for the natural gas it supplies to all the gas utility companies from Saskatchewan to Quebec.

In the first such case since Trans-Canada began piping Alberta gas to Eastern Canada 12 years ago, the eight main utility companies and six of their major customers — chemical companies who use gas as both raw material and fuel — made clear they would challenge everything from the constitutional propriety of the hearing to small dollar items buried in a mass of Trans-Canada financial data.

MANY CHALLENGERS

The governments of Alberta, Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario and Quebec also intervened with sometimes-conflicting challenges of their own.

After almost four hours of skirmishing, the opening-day session broke up early with a bid for a two-week adjournment unresolved. Led by Consumers' Gas Co. of Toronto, six utility companies and four provinces pleaded for time to study a mass of TransCanada documents.

Argument on that procedural issue and others were to be pursued today.

The case of Edgerton and the horse was raised in the earlier bid for indefinite adjournment by Toronto barrister Charles Dubin, hired especially for the case by Union Gas Co. of Chatham, Ont., one of Trans-Canada's customers.

Mr. Dubin argued that it would be more seemly for the board to step aside while the Exchequer Court of Canada is considering a simultaneous challenge there to the constitutional right of the federal government and the energy board to rule on mass of Trans-Canada documents. Trans-Canada's rates. Union Gas along with Consumers' Gas and Northern and Central Gas Corp. of Toronto, filed claims in the court last week.

Mr. Dubin cited the horse theft case — a standby precedent for such purposes — in saying the energy board should wait while the higher tribunal pondered.

It seems that back in 1912, Edgerton Rae of St. Mary's in Ontario's Perth County was acquitted by a magistrate when his accuser failed to appear. The accuser was busy in a higher court trying to bring the case there.

As recorded 15 years later, a supreme court justice ruled that in such situations the lower court should wait for the higher one to rule.

Lawyer George Finlayson argued for Trans-Canada that it would be "absolutely disastrous" to delay any longer. Trans-Canada applied for the rates hearing 18 months ago.

Wardair Granted 14-Day Extension

OTTAWA (CP) — Wardair Canada Ltd. has been given a two-week extension to March 1 in the deadline set for the charter airline to make new arrangements for securing advance payments by charter groups on overseas flights, the Canadian transport commission announced Tuesday.

The Edmonton-based company was ordered by the commission last month to post by Feb. 15 a performance bond or similar guarantee under which prepayments would be secured by a bonding or insurance company.

The commission said then that Wardair had failed to maintain the required bank trust accounts for advance payments.

Wardair has appealed the decision to Transport Minister Don Jamieson and has asked the commission to set aside the order until the appeal is decided.

Under commission regulations, non-scheduled charter carriers must deposit all prepayments in trust accounts.

Half the amount may be withdrawn by the carrier after delivering the group to its destination and the other half when the group has been returned.

Air carriers were informed by the commission last fall that a new rule is being considered which would require carriers to secure prepayments by a bond or financial guarantee.

A commission spokesman said the proposed rule has been applied to Wardair because of trust account deficiencies and it likely would be applied to the entire industry later this year.

Leadership once again...

Standard introduces the only unleaded gasoline with F-310*

Standard Oil Company — a leader for many years in the marketing of advanced petroleum products — now announces the introduction of Chevron Unleaded, the only unleaded gasoline with F-310.

Up to now lead has been used in the gasolines of all major oil companies to prevent engine "knock" and most of the cars on the road in British Columbia today still need leaded gasoline. But tomorrow's cars, starting with some 1971 models, will have engines designed to operate on unleaded gasolines. Within a few years many cars will be in this category.

Why this fundamental change in gasoline? According to automobile manufacturers, unleaded gasoline will be required for the advanced exhaust control devices now in the development stage for use on production models in the near future.

Chevron Unleaded is being introduced to keep pace with this development. It will meet the demands of those 1971 cars and succeeding models designed to operate on unleaded gasoline — and it can be used in some pre-1971 cars which are able to operate on a lower-octane fuel.

Chevron Unleaded is now available at conveniently located Greater Vancouver and Victoria Standard Stations and Independent Chevron Dealers displaying the "Chevron Unleaded" sign.

It is the only unleaded gasoline which includes the benefits of F-310.

Design Blunder, Long Delays Major Cause of Rolls Woes

LONDON (AP) — The downfall of Britain's aristocratic Rolls-Royce engineering company was a jet aero engine—the RB-211—designed to make less noise, burn less fuel and produce more power than orthodox engines and begin a new era of jet technology.

The RB-211 was engineered to power the American Lockheed company's giant Tristar jets. The contract, signed in March, 1968, was the biggest order in Rolls-Royce history.

Technological problems, development delays and wage inflation spiralled the company's cost so that by the time the engines would have been installed in the Tristar, some estimates say they would have cost twice as much as their sale price of $550,000.

Official figures on costs have not been released but a team of writers from The Sunday Observer newspaper put the cost of building each RB-211 at £460,000 (about $1.15 million).

The fate of the engine and the contract to deliver it is still in question.

To make the engine 300 pounds lighter, a British-invented carbon fibre called Hyfil was used for the turbine blades. They worked fine in ground tests, but when they were installed and flown they were frayed to pieces by a heavy rainstorm.

When the blades were re-engineered in titanium—the costs were enormous. It meant rebuilding and retooling much of the Rolls-Royce factory.

A report in The Sunday Times said that Hugh Conway, managing director for Rolls-Royce gas-turbine work, figured it would take another six to 18 months just to solve the weight problem—and the engines were due for delivery this November.

Last week the costs were £170 million (about $425 million) and still rising, the newspaper said.

In the pressure against time, reports said, parts were put into production before they were extensively tested, and as new faults were revealed—such as overheating—the engines had to be modified.

Grape Marketing Board Survives Grower Scrutiny

KELOWNA, B.C. (CP) — A five-member provisional body of the British Columbia Grape Marketing Board Tuesday survived a grower scrutiny into its crop price negotiations with wineries last year and was re-elected for a one-year term of office.

Re-elected for their first official terms were chairman Eden Raikes, Martin Casorso, L. R. Stephens, Martin Richards, Dr. E. S. Avery and Edward Wahl.

At a meeting held in conjunction with the 10th annual meeting of the B.C. Grape Growers association, the board had to explain why prices originally set by the board were later changed to a lower level.

The issue was precipitated by a question from the floor asking how "anyone can reasonably expect growers to sell grapes at less than the cost of production?"

As set by the board last summer following price disputes with five wineries in the province and subsequent arbitration warnings from Premier W. A. C. Bennett, grape prices of $185 a ton for labiuscas and a sliding scale from $180 to $195 a ton for hybrids, were later changed to an across-the-board $150 a ton for labiuscas and $165 a ton for hybrids and other types of grapes.

Director Wahl described negotiations as the "art of the possible."

"We had our figures and the wineries had theirs; they refused to talk about the facts we have to base the negotiations on," Mr. Wahl added.

There was some question on why the board did not use its powers and examine winery books "to ascertain the profits from one ton of grapes." Chairman Raikes replied the board had no power to do so, a view confirmed by Mr. Wahl.

Critic Hits Ballet Opener

TORONTO (CP) — The Australian Ballet Tuesday night opened a week of sellout performances here with Rudolf Nureyev's adaptation of Marius Petipa's Don Quixote.

The Globe and Mail called it a disappointment, saying, "Even the genius of Nureyev cannot create a balletic masterpiece out of a response to Ludwig Minkus's mediocre score."

It says Act 2, Scene 1 has "a momentary but majestic pas de deux between Nureyev and Lucette Aldous, who is a beautiful technician but who lacks romantic disposition."

For Nureyev, the reviewer has nothing but praise: "As a choreographer he is young but potentially impressive, as a dancer, he is ardent and airborne, a poet of the muses."

Bottle Drive Planned Saturday

A bottle drive concentrating on the University, Cadboro Bay and Gordon Head areas will be held Saturday by the St. George's Youth Colony, a church organization of young people.

Residents of these areas are asked to put aside either pop or beer bottles to be picked up. Hours of the drive will be from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

CRYSTAL BALLS JUST DON'T SEEM TO GRAB US

We read a good deal about advertising research and are frequently reminded of some mystical incantation—figures mysteriously projected, multiplied, divided, contorted to form a supposedly attractive story.

What ever happened to the good old how-many-copies-were-really-sold counts? That's the kind of stuff advertising rates are based on!

And it's just for that reason we have a no-nonsense, no-mystery ABC audit report of our circulation audience.

If you aren't strong on crystal balls either, just ask to see a copy of our latest report from the Audit Bureau of Circulations.

Be ABC-sure!

Jobless Plan 'Welfarism'

TORONTO (CP) — Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey's white paper on unemployment insurance is a welfare measure in disguise, says a University of Alberta professor.

Writing for the March issue of Canadian Personnel and Industrial Relations Journal, Prof. J. Douglas Muir, who teaches business administration and commerce, says the proposal provides a form of guaranteed annual income "of a limited nature," and gets away from the insurance concept.

"It provides a guarantee of up to one year's unemployment benefits. If a 'renewable' provision were included we would have a guaranteed annual income."

"While there may be no objection to the introduction of more social welfare into our system some of us take exception to having welfarism brought in through the back door on a piecemeal basis."

Excerpts of the article appear in The Globe and Mail.

Prof. Muir says a worker earning $100 a week and eligible for full unemployment benefits can get a maximum $2,756 under the present plan after paying a minimum $42 to the fund.

"Under the proposed plan he may contribute as little as $15.80 and draw out as much as $5,100."

POINTS OUT FAILURES

The white paper fails to distinguish between 'those who are simply out of work and those who are unemployed and actively seeking other employment." It also fails to distinguish between "the committed year-round worker and the semi-committed seasonal worker."

Because of this the system is open to abuse by "that large group of people who are constantly floating in and out of the work force . . . and the part-time and casual workers who have no intention of becoming full-time members of our work force."

"Under the white paper proposal it is conceivable that someone could work for eight weeks during the pre-Christmas period and then be eligible for up to 51 weeks of benefits."

Prof. Muir questions the source of funds to pay for the new plan—a cost the Canadian Manufacturers Association estimates at $450 million a year.

The Unemployment Insurance Commission estimates the cost at $308 million a year when national unemployment stands at six per cent, and $433 million when it stands at seven per cent.

SOME PAY LESS

While the contribution of a worker earning $100 a week would drop to 79 cents from $1.40 a week, persons earning more than $7,800 a year—who are not now required to contribute—"will be paying an 'added tax' of $62 a year," Prof. Muir said.

The rest of the added cost has to come from the public purse, he notes.

"Thus, either through the universal coverage or through increased personal income and other taxes, the additional costs of Mr. Mackasey's proposal will be borne largely by the middle-income group.

"This group seems to have been the target in most of the government's recent white papers. It appears to be part of a long-run objective of narrowing the income spread in this country."

Supermarket Blood Band Aid

STAND OFF, Alta. (CP) — Alberta's first food supermarket on an Indian reserve is thriving, says its manager, Louis Soop.

Located on the Blood Indian reserve in this community in southwestern Alberta, the Stand Off Superette is owned by the Blood Indian band.

"The over-all volume has increased considerably," Mr. Soop said in an interview.

He said the store has the co-operation of the federal Indian affairs department and receives assistance from Canada Safeway Ltd., one of the country's largest supermarket chains.

Soop said:

"The more people that support a business on the reserve, the more opportunity for jobs. The people must learn to help the businesses to help themselves."

Sexes Segregated

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — South African moviegoers, split into black and white audiences by apartheid laws, will be segregated even further to see a film about trans-sexualism. Male and female audiences will be separated to watch the Christine Jorgensen Story, a film biography of former U.S. seviceman George Jorgensen who underwent a sex change operation in 1953.

It's heartening to have so many letters showing a continuing interest and support hereabouts for the work of Dr. Norman Z. Alcock and his Canadian Peace Research Institute.

As Mrs. Nora Sharpe, of our town, puts it, "In the week of the invasion of Laos we need to be reminded that Dr. Alcock will never be a forgotten man so long as he and other scientists continue their work toward a goal of isolating, understanding and ending the causes of violence."

Several readers have sent me the recent Peace Institute pamphlet dealing with their studies of Quebec and the FLQ, a confrontation that they relate more directly to poverty and chronic unemployment than to nationality or ideology. Some excerpts:

"It is highly probable that members of the outlawed FLQ fit the mould of the American Black Panthers. Reared in poverty they are frustrated at the slowness of the elected government in reducing unemployment. Not only is unemployment in Quebec 41 per cent of Canada's total, but it has steadily risen over the past four years from 109,000 in 1967 to over 200,000 in 1970.

Scott

"The desperate men of the FLQ, like the Black Panthers, have turned to arson and murder out of a humanitarian concern for the poor. If this argument is valid then the jailed men of the FLQ are quite different from common criminals for they are driven by different emotions. . . .

"Why is there widespread sympathy for the separatist cause in Quebec? Because the large lower class in Quebec, like the large lower class of Northern Ireland, sees the small Protestant upper class as their enemy. And this upper class of Quebec is not only in league with the provincial and federal governments, it is controlled by English Canada. As the people of Quebec see it, they are not even masters of their own houses . . .

"In the long run, we require nothing less than a universal guaranteed annual wage to help overcome poverty and discrimination and once again (because of the War Measures Act) it has forcefully been brought to our attention that we Canadians require a modern constitution to guarantee personal freedoms."

Donations to help keep the Institute alive should be sent to 514 Chartwell Road, Oakville, Ontario.

Yes, as I suggested in some notes here on the problems of keeping dogs in the city, there is a population explosion of pets that's as chronic as the world's human over-population.

Helen Kerswell, Victoria representative of the America-based organization called The Animals' Crusaders, writes me that animal ownership and the breeding rate of puppies and kittens is at an all-time high in Canada and the States, creating a dangerous imbalance between the number of dogs and cats and the homes that are available to them.

The problem is acute in Victoria, as well, according to Mrs. Kerswell, but all efforts to interest the local breeders in the ABC (Animal Birth Control) methods of her group have failed. The result? "Enormous suffering for pets doomed to be homeless."

Mrs. Kerswell passes on this advice:

"The solution lies in the spaying of female animals. Spaying is not only the one certain means of preventing the nation-wide cruelty of breeding more animals than the nation is able or willing to provide homes for, but it also offers other advantages. A spayed dog or cat will not attract packs of male animals. The spayed animal is content to stay at home and is not inclined to roam and annoy the neighbors. The notion that a spayed animal will become fat or lazy is an old wives' tale. It won't if you don't over-feed it. The idea that a dog or cat should be permitted to have one litter before being spayed is equally mistaken."

Speaking of cats here's Louise Major, president of the Island Cat Fanciers, with news of their first annual championship show to be held at the Sanscha Hall in Sidney on Feb. 13 and 14, dedicated to the proposition that "cats are more than mere mousers and a nuisance to birds."

The public is invited both days any time between 1:30 and 6 o-clock. Among other exotic breeds they'll see Glynneath's Adagio, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Thomas, of Nanaimo, who was last year's All-American Siamese and No. 2 Cat of the Year, and a Rex mutant that may just be the only curly-haired cat you'll ever see.

My thanks to a number of women readers who have sent me recipes for "real, home-made bread," and one in particular, from Gayle Petersen, in Langford, worked out so well that I want to pass it along. Goes as follows:

Yeast mixture: One cup warm water; two packages of yeast; one tablespoon honey or molasses. Mix and let stand in a warm place (80 degrees or so) for 10 minutes.

Sponge mixture: Three cups of hot water; one-third cup of honey or molasses; one-and-a-half cups of whole wheat flour; four tablespoons of oil; one tablespoon of salt. Mix together. Add enough more whole wheat flour to make a stiff batter. Add the yeast mixture, mixing thoroughly. Let this sit in a warm place for 15 minutes so the flour can absorb the moisture.

Add enough more whole wheat flour to make a dough that can be handled, yet soft. Knead five minutes.

Cut dough into quarters, put each part into a buttered tin. (An empty stew tin is a good size — about 15 ounces.) Put into cold oven and turn on to 200 degrees for 25 minutes. Then set at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Turn out of tins immediately to cool.

Gayle adds two tablespoons of soya flour, a tablespoon of Brewer's Yeast and three tablespoons of corn meal, but that's optional.

A note now from the Locus Creative Leisure Society, whose founding members were interviewed in this corner.

"Because our work is being constantly misunderstood we feel it necessary to explain briefly what the objectives of the society are," the letter goes. "Contrary to what many people already think, our ideas are not entirely based on a 'do your own thing' philosophy.

"The society's first and foremost concern is to offer people a service which will help them cope with the increasing leisure time which is a direct result of our rapidly growing technology. The service is threefold: to help people prepare for and adjust to a creative use of leisure; to help people develop a more meaningful life based on their own creative process; and lastly to build centres where this work will be carried on.

"These are our long-term goals. Some of the projects we are presently involved in are: organizing a conference on The Leisure Society, arranging to show a film which we produced entitled "Towards Creative Leisure" to various interested groups in the community and organizing discussion groups in the community on "The Theory of the Leisure Masses.

"We hope that the community can accept the validity of our work and support us in our endeavor to establish these vital services."

Old Oil Won't Be Dumped

There is "just no way" that the Capital Regional District will allow used oil to be dumped into its sanitary sewers, chairman Hugh Curtis said today.

He was commenting on the threatened closure in the next few months of Star Oil Refining Co. Ltd., 1651 Old Island Highway, which picks up used oil from service stations and, other sources and re-refines it for re-sale.

"I will be talking to our engineering people within the next few days," said Curtis.

NOWHERE ELSE

He also said if the regional district can provide an acceptable means of disposal "that's all right."

Star Oil manager Allan Vanderkerkhove said Monday he intends closing down "in a few months" and predicted a serious pollution problem with disposal of 10,000 gallons of used oil a month.

He feared that if Star Oil closes and there is nowhere else for used oil to go, it will go down sewers and pollute beaches and the sea.

He said Star Oil's threatened closure is because there is not enough oil in the area to keep the company operating.

A local service station operator, Bob Dunsmuir, who is a director of the B.C. Automotive Retailers Association, said there is nothing which can be done with the old oil.

"It's against pollution laws to dump it down the drain and it's also against the law to burn it," he said.

He was going to Vancouver to discuss the problem with oil company officials.

Hearing Aid Shysters Prey on Aged

Greater Victoria's senior medical health officer warned senior citizens Tuesday to beware of high pressure salesmen pushing expensive hearing aids.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said there have been complaints from Silver Threads organizations that this is going on. He cited the case of an elderly person who was persuaded to buy a second-hand hearing aid for $400.

Hearing aids should not be sold to the elderly without the advice of the family physician and an audiologist, said Whitbread.

"We are unable to supply this necessary and most vital consultative service to the Silver Threads Society until an audiplogist is available on our staff."

Region Rapped for Giving Lease to Riders

★ ★ ★

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Conservationists today criticized the Capital Regional District for leasing to a private club publicly-owned parkland overlooking one of the most beautiful waterfalls on southern Vancouver Island.

Colwood Trail Riders were granted a five-year lease on land in Witty's Lagoon Regional Park — one of the most attractive areas acquired by the regional district.

●

The regional board paid $70,000 for the 10-acre property, but last year leased part of it — apparently without any controls to prevent it from being despoiled.

"This is absolutely wrong," said Elton Anderson, a former logging contractor and an official of the B.C. Nature Council. "This parkland was bought with taxpayers' money. It was for their general use."

(Taxpayers pay half-a-mill a year towards the acquisition of parklands).

Anderson wants the board to strictly control the development of the land by the club.

"The board should stop the club from making any capital investment on the property or we will never get them out of there," he said. "This is the thin edge of the wedge."

●

The property slopes down to the lagoon — a choice picnic site — overlooking the sandy spit and the sea, while to the left tucked away in a small cove is a 60-foot waterfall which few Victorians have seen because the land was formerly privately-owned.

In early days, the Indians called it "The Sitting Lady Waterfall," but now it is known as Bilston or Metchosin falls.

The regional board has leased to the club a cabin overlooking the waterfall — the best site on the property and area for parking cars and sufficient land for a riding ring.

The property is on the south

If the Board Doesn't Stop Their Plans 'We'll Never Get Them Out'

side of Metchosin Road, a short distance from the golf club. Its entrance is marked by gate stone pillars being erected by the club, but apparently without permission from regional district planners.

The public has access to the property, but most leave their cars on Metchosin Road and walk down the driveway. They can see the waterall by going around the club house.

Already the club is showing signs of digging in. A fence has been constructed on the west side of the cabin barring direct access to the fall, but it is possible to get around.

●

Some trees on a southern slope have apparently been cut down or thinned out. There are signs of soil erosion. A bulldozer has scarred the upper part of the property.

"If club members cut down those trees, they didn't get permission from us," said Tony Roberts, regional director.

Dr. John Harris, president of the Victoria Outdoor Club, said an inventory of the property should be undertaken immediately and the remainder of the property left undisturbed.

Douglas Turnbull, a former executive of the Victoria Natural History Society, said he was opposed to the principle of leasing parkland property bought with public funds.

●

"What will the board do if other clubs make requests to lease parklands?" he asked.

John White, president of SPEC, said when he first heard of the land deal, he was under the impression the club had only been given access to the property.

"The whole thing smacks of political manipulation;" he said. "Taxpayers should be on guard — should see that their land is not frittered away."

POWER TO OVERSEE PATIENT FEES

Gov't to Widen Nursing Home Control

Broad powers to control the operations of nursing homes will be consolidated by the provincial government in a bill to be introduced later during the legislative session.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark told the legislature the bill would provide uniform standards and regulations for all types of "intermediate care" facilities including private hospitals, nursing homes and rest homes, under his department. Rest homes are currently under the rehabilitation department.

Outside the legislature he acknowledged that it would give the government power to control the rates charged to private self-supporting patients in addition to present controls over rates for welfare patients.

'VIGOROUS ATTACK'

He gave no indication the government intends to use such new powers, but said the move was "preparatory to a more vigorous attack on intermediate care."

In his speech, Loffmark said he wanted to make clear that the only way to establish a province-wide system of government-supported nursing home care would be under a federal cost-sharing program.

Such a program would be "a major fiscal and social program" not unlike the introduction of medicare which could cost $150 million next year in B.C.

Federal cost-sharing would be required, he said.

TAX SUGGESTED

But Dr. Scott Wallace (SC — Oak Bay) later told the legislature the province could afford to enter the nursing care field and suggested a new tax should be levied if necessary to produce the needed revenue.

All advertisements costing more that $50 should bear a one per cent tax except for classified advertisements in newspapers, personal advertisements and government advertising, he said, referring to "vast sums" which are spent on advertising each year.

Wallace estimated the cost of providing $1,000 annual government aid to nursing home or intermediate care patients would run to $12 million a year and the cost of building or acquiring beds for them would be about $40 million, of which the province would pay $24 million and regional hospital boards $16 million.

Loffmark said later that Wallace's estimate of 4,000 intermediate care patients was far too low. The minister said that if only 10 per cent of the 65 to 75 year age group (100,000 people) and half of the over-75 group (90,000) qualified for intermediate care, that would be 35,000 persons or $55 million a year.

The president of the B.C. Association of Private Hospitals and the operator of a local rest home today both applauded the move toward uniform standards and controls.

But to the question of government control of rates for nursing and rest home care they adopted a wait-and-see stance.

John Hanrahan, operator of Beacon Hill Villa rest home, said operators had asked the standardized rules and change in jurisdiction some time ago.

As for the rest, "we don't know what Mr. Loffmark is going to do so we can't say anything at the moment."

He did add that rest home operators still regard the government's $150-a-month subsidization of welfare patients in rest homes as a ridiculously low rate.

R. J. Shepherd, president of the B.C. Association of Private Hospitals, said from Vancouver the association has always favored controls over nursing care, not only in private hospitals where there is already control, but in rest homes too.

"As far as establishing rates, we'll have to know a lot more."

Ask the Times

Q. Is there a school or individual teacher in Victoria that teaches lip-reading? How could I get in touch with them?—C.V.C.

A. There is no school or teacher in either Victoria or Vancouver that teaches lip-reading. However, Mrs. P. G. Odynsky, 3874 Cadboro Bay Road, is able to teach sign language and is a representative of the Western Institute for the Deaf. She could tell you exactly what services are available, and where, for the deaf. Her phone number is 477-1108. Pre-school deaf children are taught at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children and the Greater Victoria school board operates two classes for the deaf at Uplands school.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ONCE WHEN THE NEED arose, a friend and I prepared a dinner for guests that was better than merely good.

The cocktail shrimps basked in a sauce that contained just enough horseradish and not too much lemon. The roast emerged from the oven brown on the outside but juicy on the inside. The mashed potatoes were lumpless, the gravy no less so, and the apple pie fairly melted in the mouth.

I should explain here that my part in this feast was confined to setting the table, general flunkying, and washing the dishes. The other guy not only did the cooking — he refused to allow me within arm's reach of the stove.

This isn't to say that I can't whip out a meal when necessity demands. Give me a fire-pit on a beach, a stack of damp sea-lettuce, a mixed bag of crabs and little-necks, and nobody willing to accept a grain or two of sand with his chow need go hungry.

That kind of cooking is simple and direct. It gives a man a degree of elbow-room not to be found in the well-regulated home kitchen. The Escoffier touch may be lacking, but the appetites run hearty.

Occasionally, though, a situation requires me to undertake a bout of indoor cookery. One of those emergencies overtook us this week.

My wife came home from Vancouver — an unhealthy city where winter lingers — with a chills-and-fever cold.

"Now look," I told her next morning, "you stay in bed. Don't worry about a thing. I'll fix you a nice breakfast."

"All I want is orange juice," she said, a little too hastily. Then, between sneezes, she offered a suggestion. "For dinner, why don't you just get something quick and easy like fish and chips?"

"You leave that to me," I said, and went out to ask Ron if he'd fancy a breakfast of Spanish omelette with mushrooms on the side.

"If you're doing the cooking," he said, "maybe we'd better keep it simple. Anyway, I have to rush. I'll just have a glass of orange juice." He added too casually. "Suppose I bring home fish and chips or fried chicken or something for dinner?"

Left to my own devices, I boiled water and dropped in an egg. It looked kind of lonely, so I gave it a companion. Both eggs promptly cracked . . . the hens aren't making them like they used to.

But dinner, I assured myself would go better. The orange-juice fanciers would have a roast, cooked by the book, with spuds, carrots and a couple of onions snuggled around it to steep in the rich juices.

It was a nice picture. I shared it with my dear one, not bothering to mention the cracked eggs and the coffee that had boiled over.

There's nothing to cooking meat, I explained to her, then went on to tell her about some memorable steaks from a young, berry-fed bear, which we'd broiled in a campfire on greenwood sticks.

"Well," Win said, reaching for another tissue, "I'd just as soon not have this roast on a stick." She then furnished instructions which I found almost childishly simple. I made a mental note of them, and when the afternoon was well along, set to on my dinner preparations.

Oven pre-heated to 325 degrees. Check.

Roast dusted with salt, pepper and garlic powder, ringed with vegetables, and put in at 3 o'clock. Also check.

Nothing to it! Easier than toasting bear-meat. But as time passed, a couple of minor problems developed.

The roast didn't seem to be cooking fast enough. I ran the heat up a few notches.

When I next peeked into the oven, a gust of steam fogged my glasses. Still, it doesn't require vision to realize that something is burning.

The carrots were a loss, and so were the onions. Nothing to do but pry them loose. Also, the potatoes weren't going to be quite as I'd visualized them, and the roast had shrunk alarmingly. I turned it over — that took some prying too — shoved the pan back in, and hoped for the best.

They aren't making roasts like they used to, as I observed to Ron at what passed for dinner-time. Then I told him about bear-meat cooked over a fire that required no temperature settings.

The chances are excellent that I'll be off kitchen duty tonight. But if not, I have a menu pre-planned and heartily approved.

Fish and chips.

Victoria Curlers Gain Canadian Senior Final

KIMBERLEY — Gordon Moore of the Victoria Curling Club did it again! For the second time in three years, Moore will represent British Columbia in the Canadian senior men's curling championships.

Moore, skipping Gordon Hooey, Dick Pick and Jack Smith, captured the berth and the provincial championship Tuesday by nipping Reg Stone's Trail entry 7-6 in the deciding game of a best-of-three final series.

The two rinks, Moore of the Pacific Coast Curling Association and Stone of the B.C. Curling Association, each won once Monday.

Moore began with an 8-7 win and then was tripped, 11-3.

And it looked for a while Tuesday as if Stone, who has captured the B.C. men's title many times, would add another trophy to his shelf. The Trail resident had a three-rock lead beginning the eighth end but Moore tied it up on the ninth end and won it in the 10th.

Moore, who was runner-up in the 1969 Canadian final, makes his second bid for the title in Halifax later this month.

BILL WALKER

Baseball anyone? And the dastardly word has come down from above. The Baseball Writers' Association of America has rendered another disservice. Its members have decreed, in their eminence, that Early Wynn is not a proper choice for baseball's Hall of Fame.

The intrusion of baseball into the winter scene will have to be pardoned. There can be no dispute, because this is an art that always has intrigued your obedient servant, even though he encountered more than ordinary problems in attempting to get the side out on occasions.

And Early Wynn, the hulking one-eighth Cherokee Indian, just happens to be one of the ballplayers who, especially in his later years, come on to be one of those aging guys who had to be admired.

To bring the non-believers completely into the picture, the record book states what Wynn won 300 games in his major league career. There have been bigger winners. But not many. And three years ago when Red Ruffing of the New York Yankees was granted a place in the gallery at Cooperstown, his accomplishments were laid open for all to see. He had won 273 major league contests. Which is 27 fewer than Wynn recorded.

●

Further scrutiny reveals that Wynn was in the majors for more than two decades, five times he was a 20-game winner (Ruffing only four) and even when Early had lost his fast ball he got by with his noggin. He psyched the batters with a slow windup and a fistful of junk; and he lived strictly by the rules of his trade. An opposing pitcher who threw at one of his teammates was going down the next time he got to bat. It was an article of faith with Wynn. Few dared to doubt it.

The classic that is repeated most often concerns Gil McDougald. The ex-Victoria played who gained stardom in New York had an exaggerated batting stance in which his left foot was far forward of his right. One day Wynn protested to the plate umpire that McDougald's foot was over the line in the batter's box. The umpire replied: "His heel is on the line, only the toe is over. I'm not going to move him back."

Wynn's reply was: "Either you do, or I will." On the next pitch, McDougald moved back, flat on his back.

Of course, it is easy to make a case for an ex-baseball star, and to cite all the accomplishments would be a useless manoeuvre. Still, in the 23-year period since Lefty Grove was the successful nominee in 1947, there have been pitchers named to Cooperstown. Not one could match Wynn's record, not even Dizzy Dean, for all his glory. He won only 150 games.

But if Wynn is getting anxious, he is in good company. There are a number of players standing in the wings with him. There was the story out of New York that Yogi Berra was a stickout candidate in this, his first year of eligibility. Berra did top the vote with 242, two more than Wynn recorded. But now, he too, will have to wait until next year, or later.

Not that this is unusual. Rather it is the pattern, if a confusing one. Ask of the game's slugging greats. Ralph Kiner has been standing outside the door for 10 years now. He was seven times a home-run champion. A fellow by the name of Babe Ruth was the only one better. Babe was the best 12 times. Kiner once had back-to-back 50-home-run seasons. Only four players in all of baseball history can claim that distinction.

Bullet Bob Feller gained immediate admittance to Cooperstown when he became eligible. So did Ted Williams. Also Stan Musial. But Joe DiMiggio had to wait for three years, Roy Campanella for six. And they were pretty fair ballplayers.

A player must have been out of the game for five years, and have completed at least 10 years in the majors to qualify for enshrinement. Thus the list grows with each year, and makes selection that much more difficult.

It has been said, too, that tradition demands that nobody gets his name on the final honor roll easily. The writers obviously live by this creed, or why again would fellows such as Gil Hodges and Enos Slaughter be forgotten so quickly and almost completely? They didn't even make the top three in the voting this year.

But for Wynn, his credentials do appear at least better than most of the candidates. Or as Hall of Famer Ted Williams is reported as saying:

"Wynn — he's the toughest pitcher I ever faced."

Even Under Shadow, Oscar Can Do It All

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oscar Robertson might be overshadowed in Milwaukee by Lew Alcindor, but he still can do it all.

The Big O proved it Tuesday night against Detroit as he led the Bucks to a 107-106 victory over the Pistons for Milwaukee's 48th triumph in 59 National Basketball Association games.

Oscar had 25 points to keep the Bucks within two points of Detroit and then passed to Alcindor for the tying basket. Seconds later, he hit Greg Smith with a long pass with 22 seconds to go for the go-ahead basket.

Then, after Terry Dischinger of Detroit connected on only one of two free throws with eight seconds left, it was Robertson who grabbed the vital rebound and dribbled out the remaining seconds.

In other games, Los Angeles Lakers held off Cleveland Cavaliers 116-111, Atlanta Hawks beat New York Knicks 114-109, Phoenix Suns stopped Baltimore Bullets 114-109, Phoenix Suns stopped Baltimore Bullets 120-115, Boston Celtics nipped Chicago Bulls 90-88 and San Diego Rockets defeated Seattle SuperSonics 132-115.

SATCH STILL WOWS THEM

Proving he is a star in speaking league as he once was on baseball diamonds, Satchell Paige has baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn convulsed with laughter as he answers questions Tuesday after being voted into baseball's hall-of-fame. Long famous as apparently ageless pitching marvel and one of best hurlers of all time, Paige made hall-of-fame in special category designed to honor stars of former Negro leagues. In background is photograph of Paige, who now admits to 65 years, in his playing days. (AP Wirephoto.)

Mike Shabaga Acquired As New Coach of Cats

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Mike Shabaga, the scoring hero in Canada's 1955 world hockey championship triumph over Russia, is the new coach of the Victoria Cougars.

His appointment was announced late Tuesday from Calgary by Cougars general manager Erie Bishop.

Shabaga, 48-year-old native of Saskatoon, thus becomes the British Columbia Junior Hockey League's man-on-the-spot. He succeeds Ron Maxwell and inherits a team that enjoys a six-point hold on first place in the Coastal Division.

★ ★ ★

Maxwell was relieved of coaching duties last week in a move that touched off a week-long dispute which included a strike threat by all 16 Cougar regulars. The dispute was finally resolved after intervention by club president Bud Milner and director Jim Seymour, two of the seven-man Calgary syndicate which controls the Victoria franchise.

Shabaga's signing came while a few Cougar supporters were still seeking signatures to a petition demanding Maxwell's reinstatement as Victoria's coach.

The petition reportedly contained 320 signatures by Tuesday evening.

Shabaga was at his Saskatoon home when the Cougar syndicate announced its choice after meeting in Calgary. Milner reported Shabaga was his group's "first choice" although three others, including former Victorian Ed (Pistol) Dorohoy, had been considered.

★ ★ ★

Shabaga is expected to arrive in Victoria tonight and will assume control of the team immediately. He is expected to be in the box Saturday when Cougars visit Chilliwack and will make his Victoria debut Sunday when the team meets second-place Vancouver Centennials at Memorial Arenal.

Shabaga played professionally with Cleveland Barons, Hershey Bears and Buffalo Bisons, and with Owen Sound, Saskatoon, Trail and Penticton in the hey-days of senior (Allan Cup) hockey.

He also coached teams at Powell River and Saskatoon, and more recently was general manager and coach of Swift Current Broncos in the Western Canada League.

He resigned from his Swift Current posts early in December after a "conflict" with other team directors. Broncos, at the time, were only three points behind second-place Calgary Centennials in the Western Division of the WCHL. They are now 29 points behind Calgary.

But Victoria fans may best recall Shabaga for his feats in Penticton Vees' 4-2 victory over Russian in the final game of the 1955 world tournament.

Small but shifty and always a scoring threat, Shabaga scored Penticton's first and third goals.

'OVER-ACHIEVER' WINS GOLF'S HOGAN TROPHY

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Larry Hinson is the winner of the Ben Hogan Trophy, awarded by the Golf Writers' Association of America.

The award is made annually to a person in golf who has recovered from a serious disability as did Hogan, who came back from a crippling automobile accident to play championship golf.

Hinson, 26, has a withered left arm as a result of polio when he was five years old.

After his polio attack, Hinson, a native of North Carolina, who grew up in Georgia, vowed not to be remembered as "the kid with polio" but as a great player.

He said this drive made him an "over-achiever" in sports, resulting in his left arm being broken three times and his right arm twice.

Lawrence Threatens Plowe's Point Lead

Jim Lawrence is riding a hot streak and Victoria's Ted Plowe could lose his scoring lead in the B.C. Junior Hockey League before the Cougars get back on the ice.

Lawrence, who handles centre-ice duties for Vernon Essos, shaved a big chunk off Plowe's once-commanding lead when he collected 10 points last week on two goals and eight assists.

Plowe, who counted three times while the Cougars were drubbing the Essos 10-3 here last Saturday to run his league-leading goal total to 48, has now accumulated 89 points.

ASSIST LEADER

Lawrence, setting the circuit's assist pace with 59 helpers, has trimmed's Plowe's lead to three points and he will play two games before the Cats return to work Saturday at Chilliwack.

Essos will be at home to Kamloops Rockets in one of tonight's three league games and they journey to Kelowna Friday before returning home Saturday for a clash with Penticton Broncos.

Vic Mercredi of the Broncos is still third on the scoring list, 15 points behind Plowe and leading Vancouver's Neil Murphy by three and Victoria's Chris Riddell by four.

Dave McLelland of Penticton is the leading goaltender with a 2.12 goals-against average, followed by Victoria's Ed Forslund, who has a 3.09 mark.

Rangers Couldn't Shift Boston Heavyweights

Hodge, Esposito, Cashman Deal Blow to New Yorkers

By The Canadian Press

When you put together three hockey players who each stand six-foot, one inch and together weigh a total of almost 600 pounds, there's not much that can shift them, as New York Rangers found Tuesday night.

The heavy trio was the line of Ken Hodge, Phil Esposito and Wayne Cashman who had a hand in every Boston goal in a 6-3 Bruins victory over the Rangers.

The Bruins thus dealt a hard blow to Ranger hopes of regaining a challenging position for first place in the National Hockey League East Division. New York now is nine points behind the leading Bruins.

Elsewhere Tuesday night, Rosaire Paiement scored four goals to lead Vancouver Canucks to a 6-3 victory over Buffalo Sabres, Montreal Canadiens downed Pittsburgh Penguins 4-1 and St. Louis Blues tied Toronto Maple Leafs 3-3.

"No one can push us off the puck," said right winger Hodge who was credited with assists on all six Bruins goals. "It's not a finesse line. We have to bowl people over to get to the puck."

The Rangers outshot the Bruins 43-40 in the game and fought hard to hold Boston to a 1-1 tie at the end of the first period and 3-3 at the end of the second.

But the big Bruin line broke through for two third-period goals by Cashman and one by Bobby Orr.

It was Orr's second goal of the night and his 26th of the season. Esposito got his 47th goal in the second period.

Centre Walt Tkaczuk was the outstanding Ranger with two power-play goals in the second period.

The Rangers pulled goalie Gillies Villemure for an extra attacker in the final minute, but the tactic failed when Cashman got his second goal into the empty net, and Orr beat Villemure 17 seconds later for the final goal.

TAKE-CHARGE GUY

Vancouver, missing the leadership of injured captain Orland Kurtenbach, had a take-charge guy for one night at least when Paiement went wild with his spree of checking and scoring.

The four goals ran his season total to 16.

His first goal tied the game 1-1 in the first period and his second in the second period gave the Canucks a 3-1 lead.

The Sabres, led by two goals from Dick Duff came back to tie it 3-3 in the third period but Paiement banged two more behind Buffalo goalie Roger Crozier to put the game out of reach.

Jacques Lemaire's 19th and 20th goals of the season sparked the Canadiens to their win over a hard-checking Pittsburgh club that couldn't beat goalie Rogatien Vachon despite pelting him with 33 shots. The one goal that got by him came on a goal-mouth scramble.

The third-place Canadiens widened their lead over Toronto to five points in the East Division. The Leafs were in a position to keep pace when they held a 3-2 lead over St. Louis but a goal by Blues centre Chris Bordeleau tied it early in the third period.

KEON SETS MARK

Leafs centre Dave Keon set an NHL record for short-handed goals when he scored his 28th season goal in the first period. It was the eighth goal he has scored while the Leafs were shorthanded this season.

Boston's Jerry Toppazzini set the previous mark of seven in the 1957-58 season.

Leaders Take Eight Games

Victoria "Y" remained in possession of first place in the Greater Victoria Men's Volleyball League senior division on Tuesday after completing an eight-game unbeaten string.

In other senior games, CFB Esquimalt and Royal Roads finished with 5-3 records and Ditzler lost all six encounters.

Show for Punch Wasn't 4-F Job

VANCOUVER (CP)—"I think Punch Imlach tried to make a fool of us and I think we showed him tonight what kind of a club we have."

Rosaire Paiement, the scrappy winger who scored four goals Tuesday night as Vancouver Canucks downed Buffalo Sabres 6-3 in a National Hockey League game, said it for the whole club as he spoke of the game and his own performance.

Imlach, coach of the Sabres, had described the Canucks as "4-F" in a newspaper column following Buffalo's 6-1 win over Vancouver Jan. 31, and the reaction from the last-place Canucks was a little more than Buffalo could handle.

"There was no way for us tonight . . . Vancouver just had the jump on us all night," said Imlach.

Paiement, who had never before scored three goals in a regular-season game, said he was thinking in terms of three after scoring No. 2.

CAME ON REBOUND

"I sure was. I was really looking for it and I asked Andy (Boudrias) to feed it to me if he got a chance."

As it turned out, goal No. 3 came on a rebound, with Wayne Maki getting the assist.

"I'm not sure just how it came out," said Paiement, "but I know it was a rebound and I flicked a wrist shot to the top lefthand corner."

Paiement, who became the Canucks' self-elected "policeman" after captain Orland Kurtenbach was hurt in December, had scored just four NHL goals in regular-season play before this season and went into Tuesday's game with 12.

California School Club To Play Here

Harvard High School of North Hollywood, Calif., was scheduled to arrive in Victoria this afternoon for the start of a four-match exhibition rugby tour.

Harvard, southern California champions for the past three seasons, are slated to play Shawnigan Lake Boys' School on their home pitch at 2:30 p.m. Thursday and Claremont at 1 p.m. Saturday at Centennial Stadium.

The visitors will then depart for Vancouver and matches against Point Grey on Monday and St. George's on Tuesday.

This will be the third year that Claremont, Shawnigan and Harvard have exchanged visits.

Claremont and Shawnigan were both beaten in California last season after a double loss here the previous year.

CINDERELLA COLT IN LINE . . . . . . FOR ANOTHER BIG PURSE

Flip That Dial . . . Plain Bob's Story Is True

By BOB MYERS

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Fans of the late-late-late movies on television know the plot. There was the guy who loved race horses but was too poor to get in the same class with the rich owners. Seems like Warner Baxter was the hero and somehow the name of Broadway Bill, who was the horse, comes to mind.

Baxter and Broadway Bill overcame all manner of hardship and backstretch intrigue and guess what? They won the Kentucky Derby. Or was it the Belmont.

Switch off the TV dial for a real life story.

There's this fellow R. K. Miller, better known as plain Bob. He has a one-horse stable in, of all unlikely places, Temple City, which is a neighbor of Arcadia and Santa Anita Park.

It seems Miller had this broodmare, Miss Ali, which he bought for $400. Enter the actor and horseman, George Brent, who also is prominent on the late-late shows.

PROBLEMS MOUNT

Brent loaned Miller the services of one of his stallions, Free Rounded II, and in due time Miss Ali foaled a colt. Two or three weeks later, Miss Ali died.

That left Miller with an orphan and mounting problems of keeping the little animal alive.

Miller drove over to the ranch of Rex Ellsworth for advice and, as it turned out, Ellsworth's last bag of a special formula, sort of like a baby's powdered milk.

The weeks passed and Miller bottle-fed the friend three times a day, living and sleeping in a cubby hole over the stall and keeping an eye on his patient through an opening in the ceiling.

The nourishment and treatment succeeded and in 1970 the colt, christened romantically Hanalei Bay, hit a jackpot. He won the $100,000 Hollywood Derby.

Miller, the owner, trainer, breeder and hotwalker for Hanalei, has the colt ready for another Cinderella role. The bay colt is a well-regarded contender for another big purse—Saturday's Strub Stakes at Santa Anita.

"I just hope we stay sound," says Miller. The collective "we" sounds reasonable enough.

HALF-A-MILLION ASKED; TUG-OF-WAR EXPECTED

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Johnny Bench, 23-year-old catcher who was the National League's Most Valuable Player in 1970, wants a three-year contract in the neighborhood of $500,000 from Cincinnati Reds.

Bench hit .293 for the National League pennant-winners and slammed 45 home runs.

He predicted a tug-of-war with the Cincinnati front office: "They're hard people to deal with. They don't want to pay me too much too soon because of what they'll have to pay me in the future."

VIKING VIEWS

By Mark Hume

The athletics scene at the University of Victoria will be brightening up somewhat in the near future.

Vice-President for the administration, John T. Kyle, says that $26,700 will be spent to provide 48,000 watts of lighting for two fields on campus.

The "west soccer field" and the "north rugby field" are to be equipped with lighting systems.

Each field will acquire six light standards, he said, with each holding four 1,000-watt mercury vapor lights.

Installation has been "authorized to begin immediately" said Kyle, "but delivery time of fixtures is pretty unpredictable.

"We're hoping they'll be up within one month."

The Uvic rugby squads are off to the United States this weekend to continue play in the Northwest Intercollegiate league.

They'll be meeting Western Washington State College in Bellingham, and are expecting a rough go.

Manager Howard Gerwing said there'll be "trouble with Western even though UBC ripped them apart" last weekend.

The State team has never topped the Vikings, but this season "they've sworn solemnly to beat us" said Gerwing.

Both the Vikings and the Norsemen are "hurting" from the weekend's encounters, but that's not surprising. The Oregon State players dwarfed the Uvic athletes, and weren't hesitant about throwing their weight around.

Both Uvic squads performed well against the visitors, though the Viking backs are still rather erratic.

Every one of the backs is a strong player, but still there is something that's keeping them from clicking. They have strength, speed, and ball control, but the smoothness that's needed to make their attacking movements consistant is missing.

They've got until March to figure it out, for it's not until then that they meet the dreaded UBC Thunderbirds.

The T'birds are flying high, and it's going to take a hard-nosed, cohesive team to bring them down.

★ ★ ★

The Uvic rugger club has another challenge — but of a different sort — coming up in the future. Luckily they've got over a year to work on it.

They have until May 1972 to collect $30,000 to finance a tour of the South Seas.

A year from next spring 25 players from Uvic, and a team from UBC will head for New Zealand, Australia, and Fiji.

Gerwing said that though the "financing seems rather astronomical" he is sure that the $30,000 figure can be reached.

The B.C. Rugby Union has given a "lukewarm nod" to Uvic on a request for a grant, Gerwing said, and there are all kinds of "crazy schemes" in the works to raise money.

At present the club is holding a car raffle, but next September things will get a bit wilder, as they plan to capture the World Bed Push Record.

To do that they'd have to log over 80 miles.

It's not too certain how that will aid financing, but at least it'll be interesting.

Rugby Group Collects Big Share of Grants

B.C. Rugby Union received the largest share of $11,500 in grants awarded Tuesday to three organizations by the B.C. Physical Fitness and Amateur Sports Fund.

Attorney-General Leslie Peterson, chairman of the fund board, announced a grant of $7,000 to the rugby body, $2,500 to the B.C. Boxing Association and $2,000 to the B.C. Ladies' Field Hockey Association.

Peterson also announced that he would take in part of the Canada Winter Games in Saskatoon on Feb. 20 and 21.

Thirty submissions have already been tabled for the next series of grants, which will be dealt with by the B.C. Sports Federation, March 3-5.

The BCSF will then hand recommendations to the fund's board, which will make further announcements of awards in April.

Sanderson Pays Most As Fines Follow Fights

MONTREAL (CP) — Derek Sanderson was the biggest individual loser as president Clarence Campbell levied almost $12,000 in fines against players from five National Hockey League teams for recent bench-clearing incidents.

Sanderson was fined $500 for his part in an altercation last Dec. 12 in Philadelphia when several members of Boston Bruins became involved with some Flyers' fans.

The other incidents were a Jan. 23 brawl at Los Angeles where Toronto Maple Leafs were visiting the Kings and a Jan. 24 battle at Detroit involving players of the Red Wings and the visiting Vancouver Canucks.

The Leafs were the only teams to receive a club fine—$1,000 against the Toronto management for failure to control its players on the bench.

Sanderson was named by Campbell as the prime instigator in the Philadelphia incident. After receiving a minor penalty, he entered a penalty box and was subjected to some baiting by the fans.

The incident developed into a mutual slanging match and then into a spitting duel.

Eventually, a group of Boston players left their bench, climbed into the penalty box with Sanderson and began exchanging blows with several fans.

Aside from Sanderson's fine, other Bruins penalized by Campbell were Garnet Bailey, Wayne Carleton, John McKenzie, Dan Schock and Wayne Cashman.

Bailey's fine was $300, because it was the third time this season he left the players' bench to join a melee. Carleton, McKenzie and Schock were tagged with $200 penalties because it was their second offence and Cashman received a $100 fine for his first suah violation.

15 FINED $300 EACH

The Leafs-Kings outburst was sparked by Eddie Joyal of the Kings who knocked Leafs' goalie Jacques Plante to the ice. Referee Bryan Lewis signalled an interference penalty against Joyal and allowed play to continue.

Individual Toronto players were hit for $3,950 with Baun getting an automatic $50 fine for a misconduct, while 13 teammates were each fined $300 for leaving their bench to join a fight.

At Detroit the next night, the fights started when Wayne Maki of the Canucks and Wings' goalie Jim Rutherford became involved in a verbal altercation during a stoppage of play.

While this was in progress Murray Hall of Vancouver and Wings' Gary Bergman exchanged blows and were given minors for roughing by referee Dave Newell.

The Vancouver fines totalled $2,100, with Murray Hall paying $50 for his misconduct while Paiement and Seguin were fined $250 each for misconducts, game misconducts and leaving the bench to join the fight.

Gymnastic Meet

British Columbia's representatives in the junior men's gymnastic competition at the Canada Winter Games in Saksatoon will be staging a display of skills beginning at 6:30 p.m. Saturday in the YM-YWCA.

Admission for adults in 50 cents and for children, 25 cents.

Four Rinks Earn Berths

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Two zone winners — Jim Flaten of Prince Rupert and Paul Mamchur of Kelowna — will meet in the A event final of the British Columbia Curling Association bonspiel that went through its second day Tuesday.

In semi-final play Tuesday, Flaten stopped Jim Horswell of Prince George 8-4 and Mamchur edged Buzz McGibney of Trail, 9-8.

Despite the setbacks, Horswell and McGibney will still enter the BCCA playoff that starts Thursday for the right to meet coast winner Lyall Dagg Monday in the provincial final.

Rinks reaching the semi-finals of the A, B and C events qualify for the playoffs, along with seven zone winners.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Sparkling effort in second game helped lift Margaret Wilkinson back into victory circle of Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest after she missed award last season. Starting with 279, Margaret fired 352 in second game and then finished with 258 for 889 series in Mixed Fivepin League at Chemainus Bowlarena to win women's fivepin award in 16th week of eighth annual competition.

Rams Press Way To Win Over Oaks

Mount Douglas Rams applied a full-court press in the fourth quarter Tuesday to score a 48-46 Inter-High School Boys' Basketball League victory over visiting Oak Bay.

In a closely-fought first half, Rams took an 18-17 lead by the intermission. But Bays came back to grab a 30-26 edge after the third quarter.

Rams' coach Don Puddy then decided to go with the press and Mount Douglas drew even at 36-36 before forging ahead 43-36 with about three minutes remaining.

Jim Duddridge scored 10 of his 11 points for Rams in the last quarter while Brian Wright topped scoring with 14 points.

Doug Walton fired 15 points to lead Bays and Duff McCaghey added 12.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Providence Reds of the American Hockey League announced today that defenceman Bill Speer has been loaned to the club by Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League.

Drakes Bounce Back From Early Troubles

Startled by finding themselves trailing 39-27 at the intermission, Drake Hotel exploded in the second half Tuesday to down cellar-dwelling Robertson's Men's Wear 68-62 in a Victoria Senior Men's Basketball League game at Oak Bay High School.

Drakes now lead Roberton's by 10 points but trail second-place Labatts by 12 points.

Wayne Allen scored all of his 12 points for Drakes in the second-half surge while Gary Woodburn topped scoring with 18 and Jim Cunningham added 15.

Mike Bishop fired 14 points for Robertson's, Bob de Costa chipped in 12 and Rick Woodrow added 10.

Bombers Like Draft Results

WINNIPEG (CP) — The team with the worst record in the Canadian Football League last season did much better in the CFL's draft in college players Tuesday, getting five of the seven players they had hoped for.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers, who had first choice because of their last-place finish in the Western Conference—the losing side in the Grey Cup final—had traded away their first pick to Saskatchewan Roughriders, but through other deals were entitled to the first choices of Toronto Argonauts, Hamilton Tiger-Cats and Montreal Alouettes.

Drafting fifth, seventh and ninth, they picked defensive back Peter Ribbins from the University of Ottawa, Bob Kraemer, quarterback of the Canadian champion University of Manitoba Bisons and John Gauthier, a tackle from Ottawa.

DONNELLY FIRST

Defensive back Brian Donnelly of Simon Fraser University was the first player selected, acquired by Saskatchewan.

Ottawa followed by picking Bob Eccles, a linebacker from Carleton, while B.C. Lions, selecting third, took Archie McCord, a tackle from Simon Fraser.

Seventy-two of the more than 200 eligible players were picked in nine rounds.

"Yes, we're most pleased with the draft results," general manager Earl Lunsford of the Bombers said afterwards. "We got five of the top seven players we hoped to get."

Edmonton Eskimos had two first-round choices, picking Mel Smith, a flanker from the University of Alberta, and Cam Innis, a centre from Queen's University. Saskatchewan took Bill Manchuk, a defensive back from the University of Alberta.

Home Recipe Plan Takes Off Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of unsightly fat right in your own home. Make this home recipe yourself. It's easy, no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your druggstore and ask for Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoonsful twice a day as needed and follow the Naran Reducing Plan.

If your first purchase does not show you a simple easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't disappear from neck, chin, arms, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow this easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears—how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

Table Tennis Tournament Slated

When the teachers are away, table tennis enthusiasts will play.

At least that's what will happen at Central Junior High School on Friday, Feb. 26, when classrooms will be closed while teachers attend a conference.

Slated to run from 2 to 11 p.m. in the Central gymnasium is a Greater Victoria closed table tennis tournament, sponsored by the Oak Bay recreation commission.

★ ★ ★

Competition is slated for both sexes in under-13, under-16, under-19, adult and over-45 sections.

Information and entry forms are available from the Oak Bay recreation office (598-3311). Entry application forms, also available at area high schools, must be submitted by Feb. 23 to the recreation office, 2176 Oak Bay Avenue.

ARCHITECTS LAUNCH SAVE-STEEPLECHASE PLAN

LONDON (Reuter)—British architects announced Tuesday night a $36 million plan to save the Grand National, widely regarded as the world's greatest steeplechase.

If adopted, the plan would remove the threat that has hung over the 133-year-old chasing event. For nearly a decade, each annual renewal has been described as the "last" Grand National because of economic factors.

Now a firm of architects, Arthur Swift and Partners, has submitted blueprints for remodelling the Grand National course at Aintree, a suburb of Liverpool in north west England where the National has been run annually since 1837.

The proposed lifesave plan included a hotel, shopping centre, schools, business offices and residential accommodation.

The idea is understood to have the full approval of Mirabel Topham, outspoken 79-year-old owner of Aintree racecourse, who has repeatedly warned that the National was living on borrowed time.

PATIENT at Veterans' Hospital in Sylmar lies on a stretcher near one of the buildings which collapsed in Tuesday's earthquake in southern California. Victims are still being recovered as searchers probe debris.

BULLDOZER starts clearing the streets in San Fernando, a Los Angeles suburb. Property damage from the earthquake was extensive as houses collapsed, streets buckled and caved in.

'Get Someone Who's Alive!'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Giant cranes and bulldozers pushed through the rubble of concrete, bricks, stucco and glass at the Veterans Administration Hospital in suburban Sylmar.

Workers using sledge hammers and power saws came upon a patient in bed partly covered by tons of masonry.

"No sense getting him out," yelled a doctor. "Get someone who's alive."

Two three-storey Spanish-style buildings at the 400-patient hospital collapsed Tuesday during an earthquake. Three miles away the 850-bed Olive View Hospital, completed last October at a cost of $23.5 million and dedicated last month, was turned into a hill of cement and glass.

Twenty-three persons were known dead at the two centres.

About 25 were missing at the veterans hospital and 45 were rescued.

Rescuers said they felt air coming from pockets in the rubble nearly 24 hours after the buildings collapsed. They said this gave them hope that some trapped persons could remain alive.

ELDERLY MAN RESCUED

One elderly man was rescued in good condition after being trapped in bed 14 hours.

Through the night, under the glare of generator-powered floodlights, workers looked for other bodies.

They heard screams under the rubble. Several victims cried out for help more than 15 hours after the earthquake.

"It's my mother!" screamed Sharon Schropp, 18. "She's in there! She's in there!" Three hours later her mother was saved.

Sylmar Tragedy 'Beyond Belief'

"At least a third of the patients were absolutely bedridden. They would have just gone down with the rubble."

That was the shocked assessment given by a Victoria woman who worked at the Sylmar, California, veterans' hospital demolished in Tuesday's earthquake.

Mrs. Beatrice Warrington, 1961 Watson, told The Times today the tragedy at Sylmar hospital — 17 bodies found in the rubble so far and about 100 people injured — seems almost beyond belief.

"It doesn't seem possible because we weathered so many forest fires on the hills without ever having to put the men out."

TB PATIENTS

She said the hospital had to stick it out during the fires because a lot of its patients were tuberculosis victims "and you can't put TB patients in with others."

Mrs. Warrington, who was a Red Cross representative at the Sylmar hospital until she came here six years ago, said she is amazed it was almost completely destroyed by the quake because it was a good solid building, built just 45 years ago.

520 BEDS

It had 520 beds, she said, and housed mainly TB, emphysema and heart patients. They were all war veterans, older men from the world wars and young men from the war in Vietnam.

The emphysema patients, in particular, would have been able to do little to save themselves since they have great difficulty walking.

Sylmar is 19 miles west of central Los Angeles, and near the epicentre of the earthquake.

'I Fell Down, Hung On . . . And Started Praying'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "It didn't matter where I put my feet, the floor wasn't there" . . . "It felt like driving with a flat tire" . . . "I fell down and hung on to the sink and started praying."

Those are some southern Californians describing how Tuesday's earthquake hit them.

"The building shook like it had been wrung by the neck," said a doctor who was giving oxygen to a patient in a hospital emergency room when the jolt came at dawn.

A suburbanite: "Everyone in our apartment complex turned out. Some were not dressed for patio living."

"The woman from upstairs came down screaming," said an apartment dweller. "She said even the bolted-down toilet seat flew off. Then she got into her car and drove away."

"The water cooler broke and about four gallons went on the kitchen floor," said a housewife. "Lamps toppled, dishes fell and the sidewalk cracked out front. . . . The windows rattled like someone was pounding them with a sledgehammer. I thought our house was going to slide down the hill."

WANTS OUT

"It woke me up and I said 'Jesus' and ran toward the kids room," said a young father. "Our son and daughters were already crying and the earthquake was shaking the girl's crib. Our house wasn't hurt but the first thing my wife said to me when we were back in bed was, 'Let's get out of California.' "

"The first thing I did was sit straight up in bed," said a late-retiring bachelor. "I was really groggy. I thought it was a dream or thunder until I saw the walls move."

"The acoustical tiles started falling from the ceiling and I took a header under the desk," said an office worker already on the job.

BIG JOLT FROM A SMALL FAULT

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists examined an unimpressive crack in the earth for clues to the devastating southern California quake and for ways of predicting such tremors in the future.

The jolt that crumbled buildings, felled bridges and tore up highways was centred on a fault so small it is rarely noted in seismology maps, scientists said after Tuesday's quake.

The three-mile long Soledad Canyon fault—an underground rift in the earth, is in a sparsely populated area about 30 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

●

When Dr. Barclay Kamb of the California Institute of Technology got there Tuesday he found landslides nearby but no wide cracks across the fault itself. He could span his hand across most of them, he said.

Dr. Don Anderson, director of the Caltech seismology lab, said the lineup of the sun, moon and earth that produced a lunar eclipse Tuesday night might have triggered the tremor.

●

When the earth is between the sun and moon, opposing gravitational forces tend to squeeze the planet slightly toward the shape of a football. This extra stress on the earth's crust could have set off a quake that was going to happen anyway, Anderson said.

While seismologists admitted that little is known about the exact cause of quakes, one of them said: "We are going to be able to predict earthquakes within five years."

Seismologists have measured as many as 30 earth movements a day in California, thousands in a year, most slight but always with the ominous portent of catastrophe and perhaps with a warning for the future.

Ninety per cent of all U.S. earthquakes originate in the cracks which lace the land of California.

DERAILMENT BLOCKS CN MAIN LINE

EDMONTON (CP) — A 27-car derailment west of Jasper resulted in Canadian National Railways passengers being flown to Vancouver early today, a railway spokesman said.

The Super Continental was forced to return to Edmonton because of the derailment 100 miles west of Jasper of the cars on a 75-car coal train headed from the West-Central Alberta coal fields to North Vancouver.

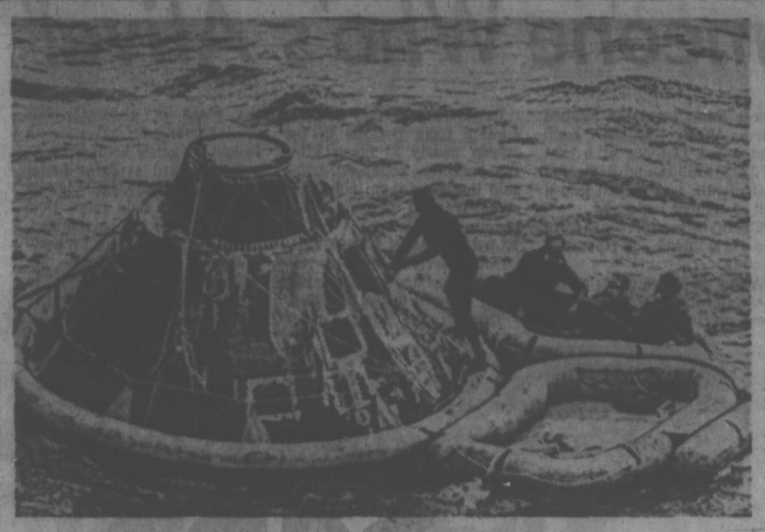

Passengers leaving Vancouver Tuesday afternoon were flown to Edmonton to make connections with the eastbound train.

A railway spokesman said the cause of the rerailment Tuesday was not known. There were no injuries and clean-up equipment was sent to the site from Jasper and Kamloops.

Astronauts in Quarantine After Successful Mission

ABOARD NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Apollo 14's moon heroes, healthy and snug in a quarantine trailer, steamed aboard this aircraft carrier toward Samoa today after safely completing man's third lunar landing mission.

From Samoa they'll be flown to the Manned Spacecraft Centre near Houston, arriving early Friday. They'll get a glimpse of their families, then continue their isolation against possible moon germs until Feb. 26.

Alan Shepard, Edgar Mitchell and Stuart Roosa parachuted to a precision landing in the South Pacific Tuesday, climaxing a nine-day lunar voyage which scientists say will greatly enrich man's knowledge of the moon.

The spacemen hit the tropic waters less than four miles from this helicopter carrier and quickly were hoisted aboard by helicopter. They were just seven-tenths of a mile from the landing target.

SAILORS CHEER

Hundreds of sailors cheered and snapped pictures, "Welcome Apollo 14" banners unfurled, and a band played as the three smiling spacemen walked smartly from the copter to the quarantine trailer.

On the remote possibility that they returned harmful germs from the moon, Shepard, Mitchell and Roosa wore protective masks.

The Canadian flying doctor, William Carpentier, who is in the quarantine van with them, reported that a preliminary medical examination showed them all to be in good health.

Carpentier, a native of Edmonton who was raised in Cowichan, B.C., is a flight surgeon attached to the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He was the flight surgeon that went in quarantine with the first astronauts to land on the moon in July, 1969.

Also in the trailer is R. H. Culbertson, a NASA engineer who maintains the van systems and helps with cooking and other chores.

After retrieving the astronauts, the New Orleans set sail for Samoa, 880 miles to the north. When the ship is in helicopter range, about noon EST Thursday, the spacemen will be flown to Pago Pago, where they'll transfer into a quarantine van aboard an air force transport plane.

21-DAY QUARANTINE

The aircraft will ferry them to Houston's Ellington Air Force Base, arriving at 1:30 a.m. Friday. They will go to the Lunar Receiving Laboratory at the Manned Spacecraft Centre to complete the 21-day quarantine period that began the day Shepard and Mitchell left the moon.

The lunar rocks they gathered in the ancient Fra Mauro highlands will go into another section of the laboratory, where scientists eagerly wait to start examination that will take months or years.

Scientists believe the moon walkers may have gathered primordial rocks dating back 4,600 million years to the creation of the moon.

Scientists hope study of these rocks will unlock many secrets of the birth pangs of the moon, the earth and solar system. All were believed created at the same time in the convulsive coming together of space dust and rocks in a mammoth gas cloud.

Following the successful splashdown, Shepard, Mitchell and Roosa received the praise of President Nixon and space agency officials.

'PROUD AND HAPPY'

"We're just so proud and happy to have you all back," the president told them by radiophone from Washington. He invited them and their wives to dinner at the White House.

Nixon told 47-year-old Shepard, who made America's first manned space flight a decade ago: "You give all of us older fellows hope."

At a news conference in Houston, Dr. George Low, acting administrator of NASA, said the success was especially gratifying because it wiped out the scars of the near-disaster of Apollo 13 last April when an oxygen tank explosion forced an abort near the moon.

Apollo 14 carried out Apollo 13's mission, which was to gather pristine rocks at Fra Mauro.

UNIVERSITY ROLE BAFFLES A THIRD, SURVEY SHOWS

One in three University of Victoria students isn't sure what he wants out of university when he enrolls, and another third of the students change their minds while they are there.

Of those who didn't know what they wanted in the first place, most (73 per cent) are still undecided as they proceed through their undergraduate courses.

This apparent lack of academic purpose was brought to light by questionnaires completed for Project University, a combined city-Uvic study of the university's role in the community.

The project has enlisted the participation of civic leaders, university faculty and students in an attempt to improve relations between campus and city, and to determine what more each could do for the other.

Among reasons for the students' vagueness, as listed in the questionnaires:

"My purpose is self-education, but as far as an educational purpose university is nearly useless . . ."

"I doubt the validity of learning from books instead of direct experience. Is a job worth it?"

"The more you come to university the more you find out about what is offered—confusion."

"While the university shouldn't become job-oriented, there seems to be little practical application."

"I am not sure what the job market will be like when I graduate."

"Indecision in future occupation. Conflict with values."

"Unable to unequivocably say I will do this or that—too much competition for the amount of opportunity in Canada."

"Confusion in mind (Purple Haze)."

Project University's main body has been broken into four sub-committees aimed at determining how best to achieve the knowledge and communication needed to achieve their goals.

A development sub-committee will examine Uvic's function in terms of the intellectual development of its students, and look at the raison d'etre of all non job-oriented study programs.

Another group will look specifically at the job-training function of Uvic, including an examination of the pre-university training and streaming system as it stands.

A research and scholarship sub-committee is to examine the value of these functions at Uvic, and to find out how knowledge and experience gained at the university can be channelled back to the public.

Finally a publicity group will determine how best to publicize the committee's findings and get maximum feedback from the community.

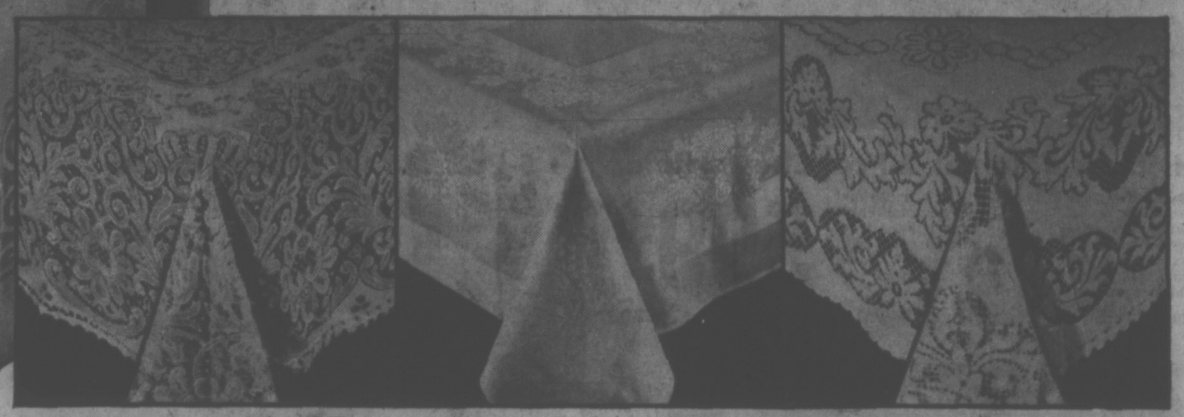

Project University is the brainchild of the Alma Mater Society.

DIMENSION 71

The look of fashion for '71 is dynamic, vital, alive! It involves shape, proportion, and balance. Knit and Stretch sewing is part of this totally new fashion story, a new and exciting dimension in creativity. Woodward's is pleased to announce that a complete "Knit and Stretch" sewing course is now offered in our Fashion Fabrics departments. It features the original Knit and Stretch Sewing Method as created by Miss Hendy Cameron, the first person to write a book about knit and stretch sewing. The course covers all areas of knit and stretch sewing, including lingerie, sports and fashion sewing. It is unique in that its approach is toward higher styled 'couturier' fashions; a sewing method that will give basic instruction yet show you how to create professional-like fashions! Register now, in Fashion Fabrics.

Racing under a billowing parachute is so much fun, these Winnipeg children don't realize how much exercise they are getting. The Winnipeg elementary school bought four surplus parachutes to help children with learning disabilities develop motor co-ordination.

Communications Nuns Push Religious Lifestyle

LONDON (AP) — Twenty Roman Catholic nuns in Britain are to become "communications sisters."

They will remain nuns, but their main duty will be to tell the public — and other nuns — about the 260 religious orders of women in Britain.

They will keep close touch with newspapers, magazines, radio and television. They plan to send out news releases, to be available for interviews, to appear, if invited, on radio and television.

The idea came from Sister Lucy Ennis, who was born in New York but brought up in Ireland. Sister Lucy, now 63, has been handling press and related information for the Society of the Holy Child Jesus at Harrogate, Yorkshire. She is a history graduate, and has completed courses in press relations, radio and television techniques.

"Even nuns themselves did not know what was going on in other religious orders," she observed. "We hope this will change now. One basic problem is that a lot of people think of nuns as spending all their time behind convent walls praying and teaching.

"That keeps a lot of young women from joining one of the sisterhoods. They dread to join what in their eyes may appear to be a group of respectable dropouts.

"We hope through better communications to show that to opt for the life of a nun is to make a decision for lifelong involvement with the problems besetting the society of the day.

"Today's nuns are free to go out, to live in a small house or flat. Nuns are no longer cut off from the world.

"Old-style uniforms have been largely abandoned in favor of contemporary dress. The short veil and ring remain to signify the sister's consecration.

"But the old image takes a long time to disappear. Just as the church today is considered by many to be totally irrelevant, so are the religious orders.

"The communications sisters will try to bridge the great information gap that exists between them and those they long to serve."

David Miles Board, head of the Roman Catholic information office for England and Wales, says: "Sister Lucy realized a lot needed doing simply to get communications working properly between the nuns and the mass media. Things just weren't getting through."

Nuns Protest Parents' Views

DETROIT (UPI) — All 10 nuns on the teaching staff of a white Catholic elementary school have resigned, effective in June, to protest alleged racism and "un-Christian" attitudes of their pupils' parents.

"We try to teach children social justice, love for their neighbor, but our attempts are either ignored or hindered by attitudes of parents," Sister Mary Margaret Slinger, principal of St. Raymond's School, said Monday.

The resignation of the nuns had the approval of officials of their order, the Immaculate Heart of Mary, based at Monroe.

The sisters announced their resignations during weekend masses.

"The fact that the teaching of Christian principles was not considered by (parish) council members as main reason for maintaining the St. Raymond school, and the fact that concern for our disadvantaged brothers in the church of Detroit was almost totally disregarded in council meetings led us to conclude that for us to staff the school would signify our acceptance —if not approval—of this mentality," Sister Mary Margaret said.

She referred to parish meetings to decide whether the school should continue in operation despite a recently-enacted state constitutional amendment which outlaws public aid to parochial schools.

She said one of the council's reasons for keeping the school open was that "property value of the area is dependent on the school." This she said, meant that, "if the school closes, people leave and 'undesirables' move in."

Woman Appointed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Lolita Wilson, Simon Fraser University's dean of student affairs, will assume the position of assistant to academic vice-president Dr. Brian Wilson in a reorganization of services March 15. Dr. Stephen Stratton, now dean of education, will become director of a new division of university affairs.

Parachutes Provide Exercise In Variation of Scarf Dance

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg's elementary schools appear to have found a way to take the drudgery out of physical education classes.

Since the school division bought four surplus army cargo parachutes and put them into use in physical education classes, student response has soared.

The parachutes are used primarily to develop motor co-ordination in children with learning disabilities, and trainable mentally handicapped children.

But, says Janet Simpson, one of eight physical education teachers employed by the division, the response from all the children she works with has been overwhelming.

"I love it, and so do the kids. Even the ones who tended to sit out for any excuse are coming in and joining in every period."

The use of parachutes as a teaching aid is a first here, but it has been experimented with in the United States. The Winnipeg school division first came across the idea at a conference at Fargo, N.D., last fall.

The division bought four parachutes for $40 each to initiate the program.

George Phillips, the division's assistant co-ordinator of physical education, says the parachutes will eventually be used in most of the city's 62 elementary schools.

DANCE IN CIRCLE

The parachutes are employed in several different routines, one of which is a dance number. The children gather around the parachute, and holding it at waist level they dance in a circle, billowing the silk over their heads.

Another routine has pupils holding the parachute at waist level and bouncing balls up and down on the silk. It is considered a particularly strenuous exercise, and even teachers sometimes go home with aching arms.

Linda Clark, a physical education consultant for the division, says mentally handicapped children often feel more secure in the learning process when they have something to hold on to, "and this is exactly what this does."

She says the program also helps slow learners to distinguish between the right and left hand and gives them a better idea of directions.

"It's a fun thing for these kids, and at the same time they're learning so much. . . . They're having such a good time they don't realize how much exercise they're getting."

This sponge cake is rolled around a coffee-flavored cream filling and iced with mocha icing.

Mocha Roll Dresses to Suit Occasion

Not many modern kitchens come equipped with heart-shaped cake pans.

Time spent bending aluminum, pouring evenly and matching halves could be used much more creatively in icing decorations.

MOCHA ROLL

¾ cup sifted cake flour
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
4 eggs
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
Coffee Cream Filling (below)
Mocha Frosting (below)

Mix and sift flour, salt and baking powder. Beat eggs until light and lemon colored. Add sugar to eggs gradually, while continuing to beat.

Sift small amount flour mixture on egg mixture; fold in. Continue until all of flour mixture is added. Fold in vanilla.

Line jelly roll pan 15x10x1½ inches with waxed paper. Grease paper and sides of pan. Pour in cake batter evenly. Bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees F.) 13 minutes.

Remove cake from pan to damp cloth. Remove paper. Trim edges of cake. Spread with Coffee Cream Filling; roll up quickly. Frost with Mocha Frosting, roughened to resemble log of wood. (Yields eight portions.)

Coffee Cream Filling

⅓ cup flour
6 tablespoons sugar
⅛ teaspoon salt
1¼ cups milk
1 cup strong coffee
2 egg yolks
1 teaspoon vanilla

Mix flour, sugar and salt in top of double boiler and stir in milk gradually. Add coffee and stir over hot water until mixture is thick and smooth. Cover and let cook 10 minutes. Beat egg yolks, stir in a little of the hot mixture and add this to filling in double boiler. Stir for 2 minutes, remove from hot water, add vanilla and cool before spreading on Mocha Roll.

Mocha Frosting

1½ cups sifted confectioner's sugar
1 tablespoon chocolate syrup
2 tablespoons butter, melted
2 tablespoons hot coffee
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

Add all other ingredients to the sugar. Beat until smooth. Mixture should be stiff. Additional sugar or coffee can be added to get proper consistency.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Not So Gay

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating an attractive widower for a year. He is in his early sixties. He takes me to nice places and is most considerate of me, but on the very first date he told me not to get serious with him. He wants to date me steady, but he doesn't want any involvements. He wants to play house with me but tells me that marriage is not in his plans. He even tells me that he is in love with me, but he isn't husband material. What does all this mean?

Should I give him up or just be satisfied to date him and hope he will change his mind?—Not So Gay Divorcee.

DEAR NOT: He is trying to tell you that he doesn't want to marry you, but if you waste your time hoping, you can't say he didn't warn you.

DEAR ABBY: One of my husband's business acquaintances has made it a habit to come here once a week for drinks and a nice thick steak dinner. He is middle-aged, divorced, and a kind of happy-go-lucky fellow. After dinner he and my husband play pool in our rec room.

I don't want to be bothered with the man every week. My husband is the kind who can't say "no" to anyone, and I am sick of this man imposing on us.

How can I get rid of him without making my husband angry at me?—No Name, Please.

DEAR NO NAME: If your husband would be angry at you if you got rid of this man, then it's obvious that your husband wants him. It's his house, too, so I advise you to start being a more gracious hostess, or your displeasure will show and your husband will be angry at you anyway.

DEAR ABBY: My elderly mother, whom I love dearly, made her home with me for many years. Caring for her this past year has been a 24-hour-a-day job. She became senile and sick, lost control of all her bodily functions, had to be fed and dressed and watched constantly. I am not complaining. She is my mother and I know she would have done the same for me—and gladly. Two months ago, her doctor insisted that she be moved to a sanatorium because the equipment essential for treatment was there, plus other factors which made keeping her at home impossible.

Remarks have come back to me that have hurt me deeply. You would think I committed my mother to a lunatic asylum or put her away like a criminal.

Abby, the sanatorium is one of the best—and one of the most expensive—which puts a strain on me financially, but if I had to scrub floors to provide my mother with the best of care, I would do it. Please print this. So many are quick to criticize when they don't know the facts.—Hurt Daughter.

Confidential to Manny: You are lucky it was only a fur coat. Next time it may be your hide.

Confidential to Worried in Bristol, Conn.: No one can build up an immunity to venereal disease. After treatment he can be reinfected again and again and again! I urge you to see a physician or go to your public health department. You will not be lectured. In your state, a doctor is authorized by law to test and treat minors without the consent of parents. Venereal disease is now the second most common communicable infection in the United States. (The common cold is first.)

I urge you to see a physician at once.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For a personal reply, enclose a stamped, addressed envelope.

For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-Agers Want to Know," send $1 to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069.

Hearts and Walnut Cakes For Valentine's Day Tea

Heart-shaped cupcakes are a perfect ending to a St. Valentine's day party. They could be served with a bright red jelly moulded in a heart-shaped pan. The children in the family should be pleased with their special Valentine treat.

The Valentine cakes pictured above were made in heart-shaped cupcake tins, but the recipe is also suitable for baking two nine-inch round cakes.

Mocha coffee served in tall mugs or glasses is an excellent beverage to serve with the walnut cakes.

COFFEE-BLACK WALNUT CAKES

2 cups granulated sugar
½ cup butter or margarine
3 eggs
½ cup cold coffee
½ cup cold milk
3 cups cake flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 cup black walnuts, chopped

Mix sugar and butter until smooth and light. Beat in eggs. Add coffee and milk alternately with flour which has been sifted with baking powder, stirring until smooth each time.

When all these ingredients have been added, beat about two minutes until light and fluffy. Add walnuts.

Pour into a dozen heart-shaped cupcake tins. Bake at 350 F until top springs black to light touch.

Cool, then frost with Coffee-Walnut Frosting. (Recipe also makes two 9" round cakes.)

COFFEE-WALNUT FROSTING

½ cup butter
3½ cups confectioner's sugar, sifted
2 tablespoons cream (or milk)
3 tablespoons hot coffee (approx.)
½ teaspoon vanilla extract
¼ cup black walnuts, chopped

Soften butter. Add to sugar. Add all other ingredients except walnuts. Beat vigorously until light and fluffy. Additional sugar or coffee can be added to obtain desired consistency. Fold in walnuts. Spread on cake at once.

COFFEE MOCHA

6 cups brewed coffee (about 33 ounces)
Peel of one orange, in strips
¼ cup sugar
1 quart hot chocolate
1 cup whipped cream or 8 marshmallows
Ground cinnamon.

Brew 6 cups of coffee in the usual manner. Reserve 8 long strips of orange peel for garnish. Put balance of orange peel and sugar into brewed coffee, steeping for 15 minutes (do not allow to boil).

Divide hot chocolate among 8 mugs or tall galsses. Fill with coffee. Put spoonful of whipped cream (or a marshmallow) on each mug. Sprinkle with ground cinnamon and garnish with twist of orange peel.

Cheesecake Has Survived the Test of Time

By EDITH VANOCUR

WASHINGTON (WP) — Cheesecake, I thought, was a product of New York delicatessens. I was wrong. It was also known to the ancients.

History has it that when one of Socrates' admirers sent him a cheesecake, Xanthippe, his wife, trampled on it to get even with him.

Cheesecake was also given as ritual offerings to the gods. Philosophical treatises were written about cheesecake and it was given as a prize to the Greek who could stay awake longest in a contest.

With the rise of the Roman Empire, cheesecake migrated to Italy. There Ricotta cheese was used in its preparations. By the time cheesecake found its way to Paris a creamier cheese was often used.

By the 17th century and the birth of the coffee houses in Europe there were almost as many recipes for this delicious cake as there were coffee-houses.

The ambition of almost every proprietor of a coffee house or konditorei was to invent a cake so delicious, it would be known forever by his name. Some succeeded, such as Franz Sacher and Herr Dobos. The recipe below is not named after anybody, though maybe we should call it Socrates. It certainly is fit for the Gods and who ever heard of a God counting calories!

CHEESECAKE

Crust:
1 package zwieback
¼ cup sugar
1 stick butter
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Grind zwieback in blender. Melt the butter and mix with all the above ingredients. Press to the bottom and sides of a well-greased 9" spring form.

Filling:
6 egg yolks
5 egg whites
2 lb. cream cheese at room temperature.
1 cup sugar
Juice of ½ a lemon
Pinch of salt

Beat egg yolks and sugar in an electric mixer until light in color. Continue to beat adding one packet of cream cheese at a time. Add lemon juice. Beat egg whites to soft peak consistency and fold in to the cheese mixture. Pour into the crust and bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes.

Topping:
1 pint of sour cream or sour half-and-half
4 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons extract of vanilla

Mix the above ingredients. Spoon gently from the outside to the centre over the cheesecake. Raise the oven temperature to 400 degrees and bake an additional 10 minutes.

The cake will look as if it should be baked longer. It shouldn't. It should be made at least one or two days ahead. It freezes well.

Toppings (optional).

Divide the cake into four quarters with index cards. Fill each quarter with fruit according to season, but keep a color scheme in mind. Remove cards.

PETITS POTS DE CREME AU CHOCOLAT

Serves four.
6 eggs, separated
6 squares semi-sweet baking chocolate
1 oz. brandy, creme de menthe or rum (optional)

Melt the chocolate in a double boiler. Remove from heat and stir in the brandy. Add each yolk separately, stirring vigorously throughout. Beat the whites and fold gently into the chocolate mixture. Pour into small pots de creme or coffee cups. Should be made a day ahead.

TREACLE TART

Generously cover the bottom of a 9" pie shell with bread crumbs or stale cake crumbs. Spoon enough golden syrup on it to bring the filling up to half an inch. Bake as for pie instruction and serve piping hot. A good desert for cold days.

Lines Around The Mouth

The mouth area comes in for so much attention, the quicker the lines are smoothed out and made to disappear, the younger you will look. A lotion-like substance 2nd Debut applied nightly will make the lines fill in and the skin become smooth once more. You will probably use 2nd Debut on your entire face to banish dryness, but do use a little extra care around your mouth. After applying the 2nd Debut massage very lightly, until it disappears into your skin. Your drug or dept. store has 2nd Debut with CEF 600 or CEF 1200 in double strength and you'll find it a genuine delight to use.

British Army Shooting to Kill In What Is Now the Belfast War

By SIMON WINCHESTER
The Manchester Guardian

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — There have been clues in the past four days that the 7,500-man British Army force in Northern Ireland now is fighting a war in Belfast, acting for the first time as an army and not as a police unit.

During the weekend, five civilians and a soldier were killed in street fighting between British troops and members of the outlawed Provisional Irish Republican Army.

Monday, a 5-year-old girl was killed when a British Army scout car ran over her while she was playing in a street.

Three facts bring home the realization that Britain is fighting a war in the streets of Belfast:

● The Northern Irish government said Thursday that it had "noted with satisfaction that soldiers had inflicted casualties on subversive elements." This message seemed to be a wartime announcement of success against an enemy.

● Similarly, the British Army's action along a Belfast road Saturday morning after an armored car had been set on fire was the action of a military and not a civil force. Whatever may have been said subsequently, there is no doubt troops had fired deliberately at a group who they thought had been responsible for burning their vehicle.

There was no suggestion at the time that troops were "returning fire." No "enemy" shots had been fired at that time: the army shot and killed a man as they might have shot a guerrilla — not for what he had done but for what he was.

● Increasingly tight security, especially after dark, has been imposed on the streets of Belfast. British soldiers are on guard in force near the Catholic ghettoes, and green armored cars patrol the roads.

So, in spite of the continuing talk of minimum force and policies of containment, it is becoming abundantly clear now that the British soldiers here are engaged in a sporadic, dangerous, and bitter street war.

In the short term this war will be won, of course, by the British Army. They are taking on an enemy whose early success came simply because the army's role had been so alarmingly ambivalent. But it is a role that has evolved dramatically since the latest round of troubles began at the beginning of January.

A month ago, Catholic girls had been dancing with British troops in a bleakly cheerful discotheque built in Belfast's Ballymurphy area by the troops as part of their community relations effort. Ballymurphy is held in the tenuous grip of the IRA's militant Provisional faction, a 1,200-strong group, and the news that their girls were dancing with the hated British soldiers went down badly.

The IRA, illegal in the south of Ireland as well as the north, is dedicated to reunification of the whole island.

On the way home the girls were abused and spat at. Mothers, egged on by the militants, swore their lasses had been raped, especially by the black men in the army. Within a day or so the soldiers themselves came under first the insults, then the bricks, the gasoline bombs, the acid bombs, and all the crude paraphernalia of Provisional Republicanism.

As the violence spread, the armory became more sophisticated. Dozens of nail bombs, some lobbed over houses by massive catapults, began to chip away at the steely reserve of the troops.

There was a lull and the state and the Catholic church began, inevitably, to proselytize. Then, equally inevitably, began a weekend of rioting that inflicted far more damage in 24 hours than the fortnight of sporadic trouble before.

There were hurried ministerial talks in London, two British ministers came to Belfast, and then there was another lull.

Finally, the Kashmire Road exploded at lunchtime last Wednesday. The excuse — an arms search — was there, as the Ballymurphy girls had provided an excuse a month before.

The five Provisional centres which had regrouped and rearmed turned on the army once again, shooting, burning, destroying with a curious combination of respectable Republican ardor and mindless and costly nihilism.

Clearly, though the troops had been given their orders, the political consequences of interning the rioters without trial were simply too much to bear. But killing them, in a warlike situation, was evidently fair, and this is what has happened.

Four, perhaps five, Provisionals are dead and will be buried with full Republican honors this week. One young, newly married soldier is dead as well, the first soldier to be killed here on active service. "We have a bloodied nose now," said an army commander. He realizes there will probably be many more army casualties, many more bloodied noses before the Provisionals in Belfast are wiped out.

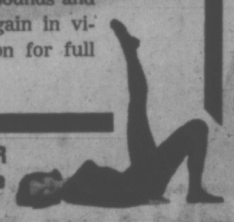

Study 'Not Needed'

REGINA (CP) — Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher's plan to have a commission study labor courts in Australia and Sweden would be a waste of $2 million, a University of Saskatchewan professor said.

Dr. S. P. Muthu said the provincial government should rely on three studies already carried out by Canadain commissions and another by a United States study group.

One commission, done for British Columbia in Sweden in 1967, said success of labor courts in Sweden was due to the social climate in that country and results wouldn't necessarily by the same in Canada, Dr. Muthu said.

NDP Bares Policy

REGINA (CP) — The New Democratic Party Tuesday unwrapped a party policy package on which it will fight an election "and the sooner the better."

NDP leader Allan Blakeney told a news conference today the 20-page party platform, which contains promises of public devlopment of resources to change in social programs, was prepared by a 16-member committee headed by Walter Smishek, the member of the legislature for Regina North East.

Warning Sounded

CALGARY (CP) — If governments continue to intervene in private industry "mediocrity" and a lower standard of living will be the result, Senator Harry Hays told the Meat Packers Council of Canada. The former Calgary mayor told 300 delegates the industry should do something about problems in the meat packing industry before the government does.

Tough Year Forecast

SASKATOON (CP) — Farmers face a more difficult year this year than last, Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmer's Union, said Tuesday. Despite predicted healthy grain sales, most of the farmers' income this year will go toward paying off accumulated debts, he said in an interview.

Youth Hangs Self

FORT SASKATCHEWAN (CP) — An 18-year-old youth sentenced to six months for automobile theft, hanged himself early Tuesday in provincial jail. Warden Ernest Noel said Irvin Hugh Tremoyne of Edmonton started his sentence Jan. 4 after pleading guilty to the charge.

★ ★ ★

Dual Duty Studied

SASKATOON (CP) — The Saskatoon Police Commission Tuesday established a subcommittee to consider the feasibility of using firemen as backup police officers.

Police commission chairman Mayor Sid Buckwold said it might be possible for firement to ride as second officers in police cars on evening shifts.

"I think it is worth trying just to see if it is possible," said the mayor.

Mayor Buckwold brought the suggestion before the commission last month and the police and fire chiefs have said they don't think the idea is practical.

Bursaries Planned

SASKATOON (CP) — The province plans to allocate $300,000 in its 1971-72 budget for post-secondary education burasries, Dave Erickson, University of Saskatchewan student union president, said today.

While no amount was announced previously, Premier Ross Thatcher said a bursary program commission would be established during the legislature session this year and that he hopes the recommendations would be implemented as spon as possible.

TROUBLE GANGS UP ON FLIN FLON MAN

FLIN FLON, Man. (CP) — History has its black Tuesday, life has its blue Mondays but for Bob Harmon it was a sad Saturday.

Visiting across the border in nearby Creighton, Sask., he received a terse message that fire was destroying his home in this northwestern Manitoba town.

Hurrying home he missed a stop sign, smashed his car into a half-ton truck causing an estimated $1,500 damage.

Harmon got home in time to see the fire truck run out of water and watch his house burn to the ground.

Then came Blue Monday. Harmon was fined $16 when he pleaded guilty in court to a charge of driving without due care and attention.

B.C. News Roundup

City Fights Hike

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Council here went on record as being opposed to B.C. Tel's application for a telephone rate increase. Mayor Muni Evers called the proposed increase "unjustified" because he said B.C. Tel already makes a great deal of money and charges the highest rates in Canada.

Way Out Found

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — The District of North Vancouver will switch to dual assessment rolls in a move to get around restrictions on the percentage boosts on taxable properties. District council, sitting as a policy committee, approved Monday the setting up of dual rolls on the recommendation of municipal manager Greg Darychuck.

Doctor Acquitted

VANCOUVER (CP) — A common assault charge against Dr. Ernest Ledgerwood of Vancouver was dismissed in provincial court Tuesday.

The charge had been laid by the 44-year-old mother of a young patient in the emergency ward at Vancouver General Hospital.

The mother, Mrs. Norah McSherry, told the court the doctor pushed her and knocked her to her knees while pulling a curtain around her 14-year-old daughter. She alleged the incident occured last July 22.

Rest Home Opposed

CHILLIWACK (CP) — Plans by Cool-Aid of Vancouver to establish a rest home for its workers on a farm at Ryder Lake near this Fraser Valley community were opposed by a group of local residents at a meeting of Chilliwack township council Monday. A delegation lodged a protest with council, saying an influx of "hippie types" would bring problems of drug users to the area.

★ ★ ★

Tardiness Pays Off

WHITE ROCK (CP) — Rose Leonard's life was probably saved by the frost that coated her car windows.

She was 10 minutes late for work Monday after wiping the windows clean.

In that 10 minutes, an explosion blew out the walls and wrecked the stock of her husband's radio and television store where she worked. No one was in the store at the time.

Damage was estimated at $75,000.

Service Folds

KAMLOOPS (CP) — The Thompson-Nicola Valley United Community Service, serving Kamloops and Merritt areas, fired its full-time executive director Tuesday as an economy measure and said the organization is in the process of folding up. Community service president Harold Whitfield said the decision to eliminate the position held by Bob Branch was made by the board of directors.

Dance Vetoed

RICHMOND (CP) — A request to permit a fair and street dance on May 28, as a student centennial celebration, was automatically rejected after a tie vote in municipal council Monday. Aldermen opposed to the fair said it would hurt local merchants because No. 3 Road from Cook to Anderson roads was to be closed from 6 p.m. to midnight.

Sewer Approved

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — The village of South Fort George, adjacent to Prince George, has been granted approval to proceeed with a planned $290,000 sewer system.

THE WEATHER

It was cloudy and mild in nearly all sections of B.C. overnight. Rain continued along the south coast while the Prince George district had periods of freezing rain. Snow was reported in the Columbia-Kootenay region.

A southwesterly circulation of mild moist Pacific air will continue over B.C. for at least the next 48 hours. An active disturbance embedded in this flow will cross the southern mainland today. Brisk westerly winds and some clearing will occur along the south coast this afternoon in its wake while occasional rain or wet snow will accompany it through the interior. The next system in the series will reach the B.C. mainland Thursday afternoon or evening.

Gambling Secrets For $100

TORONTO (CP) — A. B. (Bert) Irwin, who says it's easy to win at the gambling table, may be taking the biggest gamble in his life.

He has set up El Casino College where in four lessons for $100 he'll teach men how to win at craps, roulette or blackjack—but not poker, in which bluffing is a major element of play. Women may take the course for $75. The $25 price difference is not explained.

El Casino, billed as Canada's first gambling school, opens March 1.

Police took a look at the college the other night. Comment was reserved until they see the school in operation.

Mr. Irwin, 41, is the author of a $50 set of books which outlines a mathematical system applicable, he says, to any game of chance—except poker.

He gave up his job as a dental technician for the gambling table.

After practising for three weeks, he says he went to the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver with $80 and ended up $47.25 ahead playing a wheel of fortune. Then he took $800 to Las Vegas, Nev., where he says he won $8,000.

Then followed a "successful" three-week tour of Europe's gambling casinos.

He doesn't play any more. "The longer you play, the more immune you get to winning. The excitement is gone."

BETTING on the public's desire to break the bank A. B. Irwin (above with his five-girl teaching staff) is opening the El Casino College, where for $100 ... or $75 if you're a lady ... he'll teach you the fine points of gambling. Police, who recently took a look at the school, are reserving comment until they see it in action. (CP Wirephoto.)

Halibut Industry In East Threatened

HALIFAX (CP) — "I figure with fish that's down that deep this mercury thing has always been there," says halibut skipper Garfield Anstey. "I don't figure it's anything new—they're making too much out of it."

Nevertheless, high levels of mercury contamination have been reported in the larger halibut—over 100 pounds—following closely the discovery of intolerable amounts of mercury in swordfish off the North American east coast. Large halibut are being withheld from market until more testing has been done.

The mercury scare has brought the $4 million Canadian swordfishery to a standstill, and halibut men are worried that the same thing may happen to them.

The halibut, a big flat fish that feeds on the ocean bottom, is worth about $1.2 million annually to Nova Scotia fishermen.

"This is a good industry," says Captain Anstey, who operates two 92-foot halibut boats out of Halifax.

"Our men are happy. Some have been with us five years and more. We have eight men in a crew. We could do with seven, but the extra hand means somebody can have a holiday ashore. Wages are good —$7,500 to $9,000."

LONDON — Two girls who went to work in hot pants were in hot water today for raising male temperatures and lowering the production of British cars and cookies. Susan Best, 16, was fired for violating "decency rules" at a Peek Frean biscuit factory in South London. Kim Moon, 21, was scolded by the management at the British-Leyland automobile plant in Birmingham for taking up the new fashion rage but won her case. The complaint at both factories was that men were leaving the production lines to look at the legs. Kim wore a see-through blouse with her hot pants. The works manager asked her to go home and change into something less eye-catching. But he backed down when Kim won union support for her skimpy black shorts. "My view is that it's up to the firm to keep the men under control," she said.

LOS ANGELES — Susan Atkins, in a dramatic witness stand confession, has said it was she who stabbed actress Sharon Tate and used the victim's blood to scrawl the word "pig" on a door during a nightmarish slaughter. "I killed her, I stabbed her and she fell," Miss Atkins said. "And I stabbed her again. I don't know how many times I stabbed her and I don't know why I stabbed her." Miss Atkins the first defendant to take the stand in the nearly eight-month trial, told her story at the penalty phase in which the jury must decide on life imprisonment or death for the convicted clan leader and three women co-defendants, of who she is one.

OTTAWA — Rotund Transport Minister Don Jamieson was asked Tuesday to "lend his great weight" to persuading Air Canada to hire more native Indian girls as stewardesses. Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) told Mr. Jamieson in the Commons that he had not seen an Indian stewardess on any Air Canada flight during extensive travelling over the last two weeks. The minister, smiling weakly, was not given an opportunity to reply by Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureaux.

ROCHESTER, Minn. — Evangelist Billy Graham was expected to be hospitalized three or four days with about a week's recuperating period following surgery this morning for the removal of a salivary gland. The surgery was scheduled in Methodist Hospital here, according to a spokesman for the Mayo Clinic, who said the operation was recommended by Mayo doctors. Graham, 52, cancelled speaking engagements at the National Presbyterian Church in Washington Sunday and before the Golf Writer's Association in New York Feb. 16, but said he hoped to be able to keep an appointment for the North Carolina Governor's prayer breakfast Feb. 18.

OTTAWA — Benzyl violet 4-B, a purple dye used for marking the federal grade on meat, may soon be restricted and possibly banned, health department officials say. Experiments with food and drug directorate rats indicate that the purple synthetic dye could produce cancer of the skin. The officials say a "remote possibility" exists that the dye could produce cancer in humans if too much was consumed, but they stress the dye does not pose a health hazard under normal use. Dr. Alex Morrison, deputy director of the directorate, says linking cancer with the purple dye is "questionable."

3 ECONOMY-MINDED MEALS THAT SATISFY BIG APPETITES AND SMALL BUDGETS

POT LUCK CHICKEN CASSEROLE

1 — 4-lb. stewing fowl, cut up.
⅓ cup flour.
Salt and pepper.
¼-cup rendered chicken or cooking fat.
12 small carrots, scraped.
18 small white onions, peeled.
3 stalks celery, cut in 1-inch lengths.
Dash of allspice.
1 bay leaf.
¼ Teasp. marjoram.
1 Teasp. Accent.
½-cup apple juice.

Roll chicken pieces in flour seasoned with salt and pepper. Brown in hot fat, turning frequently to brown evenly. Place in a large casserole. Add carrots, onions and celery. Pour 1-cup water into pan in which chicken was browned; add 1 teaspoon salt, a few grains of pepper, allspice, bay leaf, marjoram, and Accent. Simmer until pan juices are loosened. Strain into casserole. Cover and bake in slow oven (300° F) 1½ hours. Add apple juice. Increase heat to hot oven (400° F) and bake, covered, for 1 hour. Serves 6.

PORK CHOP SUPPER

6 pork chops, ½ inch thick.
1 (7½ oz.) can Hunt's Tomato Sauce with Onions.
½-cup chicken bouillon.
2 Tablesp. brown sugar.
2 Tablesp. vinegar.
1 Teasp. Worcestershire sauce.
1 Teasp. dry mustard.
1 (1 lb.) can potatoes, drained.
1 (1 lb.) can peas, drained.
1 Teasp. salt.

In Dutch oven or deep kettle, brown chops on both sides. Combine Hunt's sauce, bouillon, sugar, vinegar, Worcestershire, salt and mustard. Pour over chops. Cover, simmer 45 minutes to 1 hour. Add potatoes and peas, cook until heated through. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

CHICKEN NAPLES

1 (2½ to 3 lb.) frying chicken, cut up.
⅓ cup flour.
Salt and pepper.
⅓ cup salad oil.
1 (13 oz.) can Hunt's Tomato Paste.
2 cups chicken bouillon.
1 cup chopped celery.
½ cup chopped green pepper.
1 Teasp. salt.
1 clove garlic, minced.
½ Teasp. sugar.
⅛ cup dry white wine.

Coat chicken pieces with seasoned flour. Brown well in oil. Remove excess fat. Combine remaining ingredients, except wine, and pour over chicken. Cover skillet and simmer 35 minutes. Add wine and simmer 15 minutes longer. Makes 4 servings.

Physiotherapy Fee Cutback Hurts Many

By ELIZABETH FORBES

While I was taking therapy to bring my elbow back to normal as quickly as possible, I sat in a physiotheraptist's waiting room on a number of occasions.

Around me were other men and women. Some were recovering as I was from broken bones. Others (and they were in the majority) were obviously suffering from more serious complaints.

Forbes

It wasn't long until I realized there were many more harrowing conditions than a broken elbow.

I also learned there is still much concern over a cut in the B.C. Medical Plan brought in by order-in-council last July, especially amongst those who need (and should have) a fairly long series of treatments.

★ ★ ★

You may not remember that the B.C. plan originally allowed a ceiling of $50 per year for each individual (including every member in a family) with 10 per cent of this accepted by the physiotherapist.

Last year's order-in-council cut this amount to $25 a person, less the 10 per cent. It also placed a ceiling of $50 for a family.

When I questioned my therapists, Miss Sybil Lees and Miss Elspeth Kerr, about this, they told me that therapists work closely with the medical profession and therefore the greatest number of their patients are referrals from doctors, with instructions for a certain kind and certain number of treatments.

They have noticed since the order-in-council came into effect that some patients are exercising what they name regretfully as "false economy" and are not completing the treatments advised by the doctor. Thus leading to possible chronic disabilities which could be avoided.

Others "genuinely cannot pay" which often leads to the inevitable necessity of using valuable beds in hospitals to obtain the physiotherapy under the BCHIS.

It was pointed out that other paramedicals have also been cut to $25 but for UNREFERRED cases.

★ ★ ★

Podiatrists, for instance, are covered for all referred cases above the $25 and with no ceiling.

If the government trusts the medical profession to use discretion in the case of podiatrists, why not for physiotherapists? This is the question that seems to remain unanswered.

In the meantime many who should have continuing treatments over a period of time are finding it impossible to absorb the increased costs.

When I was in Vancouver to attend a recent seminar on the report of the Royal Commission on the Status of Women, I listened, in one of the discussion groups, to a young woman speak in a very derogatory way about "the establishment."

Finally someone asked her just what she meant by "the establishment."

★ ★ ★

She looked around blankly. Thought for a moment. Then, with a rather flippant wave of her hand, said "all of you."

It looked and sounded as if she meant everyone in that room or anywhere else, but herself.

"Well, that makes it easier to understand," murmured the woman who sat beside me and who was listening intently but saying little.

"At least, from now on, I'll know when someone shouts or screams about the establishment that it likely means everyone but the person who is doing the shouting and screaming."

★ ★ ★

I came home and looked up my Oxford dictionary. Two definitions given there for the word "establishment" are "a settled position in life" and "a regular means of support."

Illuminating, isn't it?

Police Court

Frank Richards, 24, of 2920 Prior, was fined $400 by Judge Edmond St. Jorre in traffic court for driving with his blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

St. Jorre also suspended Richards' licence for eight months.

Gerd Burman, 21, of 1171 McKenzie, was fined $350 for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

His licence was suspended for four months.

Mathew Leggeat, 44, of 740 Mary, was fined $350 for impaired driving and his licence suspended for six months.

MPs DEBATE BENSON'S BUDGET

Lively Session Expected Over Jobless

OTTAWA (CP) — Unemployment was scheduled to raise its contentious head in Commons debate today on the second-last day devoted to dissecting Finance Minister E. J. Benson's Dec. 3 budget statement.

Both today and Thursday have been set aside to finish debate on a government motion calling for approval of its current economic policy, with opposition members expected to get in full-scale critical licks over what it maintains are insufficient federal measures to expand the economy.

The sittings should spark the House. With the spotlight trained on the nearby federal-provincial conference Tuesday the Commons plodded through a drowsy day that even the subject of pollution failed to enliven.

Members spent the first part of the day considering the government's reorganization bill in committee-of-the-whole, focussing on the part of the omnibus bill that would create a federal environment department.

Ron Harding (NDP — Kootenay West) introduced three amendments.

One, which would have permitted the establishment of a national environmental advisory council to comment on the progress of anti-pollution efforts, was ruled out of order on the ground it would involve the expenditure of money.

A second, designed to give the proposed environment minister jurisdiction over all federal pollution matters rather than those not designated by Parliament to other ministers, was defeated.

A third to insert "prevention and control of pollution" into the bill as one of the minister's duties was set aside for later consideration.

Donald MacDonald (PC—Egmont) claimed the insertion was necessary to ensure that the department would work to prevent pollution, and not just to take "nice-guy" measures to control it.

C. M. Drury, treasury board president, maintained that the word pollution was too difficult to define, and said the issue was covered by the bill's inclusion of the minister's duty to "protect and enhance the quality of the natural environment."

Later in the day third and final reading was given to three bills, including one to expand the scope of the Export Development Corp., another to tighten trade ties between Canada and New Zealand, and the third to give the Dominion Bureau of Statistics access to corporate and personal income tax returns.

SEEK MORE DETAIL

Although not critical of the trade bill itself, Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin) and Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon Biggar) said the government should tell western cattle ranchers how much beef it intends to let New Zealand export to Canada.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, a western rancher himself, said there have been no problems with New Zealand beef exports to date, other than those New Zealand attempted to trans-ship through Canada to the U.S.

On the export development bill, which would double the corporation's capital to $100 million and triple to $150 million the insurance coverage available for Canadian investment abroad, Bruce Howard (L—Okanagan Boundary) said the increased coverage would enable more Canadian firms to invest abroad.

Gerald W. Baldwin (PC—Peace River) said his party supported the bill because it could be a valuable tool in closing the technological gap between rich and poor nations.

Old Soldier Buried

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Canada's oldest soldier and last survivor of the Riel Rebellion, Sgt. Billy Mills, was given a full military funeral at London with members of 1 Battalion Royal Canadian Regiment firing a 21-gun salute. Mr. Mills, who died Thursday night at Westminster Hospital, would have celebrated his 105th birthday after this month.

MLA Wants E & N Forced To Finance Island Road

A Socred MLA Tuesday told his party to force the E & N Railway to help pay the cost of highway construction on Vancouver Island.

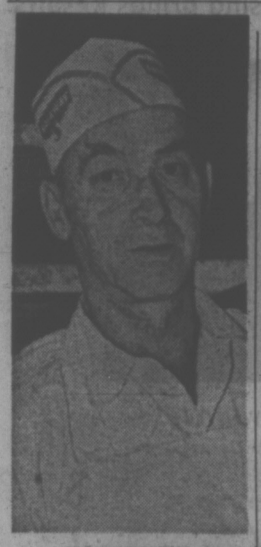

Howard McDiarmid (SC — Alberni) told the legislature improvement of the Island Highway is the "number one priority" on Vancouver Island.

He said Liberal Leader Pat McGeer is wrong in assuming, as suggested Monday in his reply to the budget speech, that the Island needs a rapid transit system to replace highway travel.

McDiarmid said the automobile is the confirmed method of transportation on the Island and no amount of improvements will make the E & N Railway assume dominance over cars.

The E & N claims it is losing $.75 million a year, McDiarmid said. What the government should do is make the company show its books, and assess them the amount of the loss for highway construction in return for not running the railway.

"Why shouldn't it? (help pay for road construction). They've been given nearly all the riches of Vancouver Island."

Ney Makes Plea For Nanaimo's Heroin Crisis

Nanaimo needs immediate provincial money to fight heroin use, Frank Ney (SC—Nanaimo) told Attorney-General Leslie Peterson Tuesday.

Speaking in the budget debate, Ney told the legislature "Nanaimo has the second highest ratio of heroin users in Canada." Victoria used to be second, but now ranks third, he said.

He said the number of heroin users in Nanaimo has grown from none three years ago to between 75 and 125.

Ney, who is also Nanaimo's mayor, asked Peterson and Premier Bennett to direct a portion of the province's new $25 million, drug, alcohol and cigarette education, prevention and rehabilitation fund to his city.

He proposed free treatment of heroin addicts at the Nanaimo Health Unit and stepped-up law enforcement against traffickers.

"We need a crash program. I cannot over-emphasize the urgency of this matter, and because of it, in this particular debate on the budget speech, I have confined my remarks entirely to the problem of drugs in the community of Nanaimo."

Breadline Fate Now Faces Bakers

DUNCAN — Canada's sagging economy is making life crummy for bakers, sasy Joe Tourchynuk, 56, of Nanaimo.

Tourchynuk, who has baked in this area for 15 years, says housewives are now buying cake mixes and other do-it-yourself cooking materials rather than buying from bakers.

As a result, he is not working steady for the first time. He manages to work one day a week in a Duncan supermarket.

Soon, he says, he will have used up his savings to support his wife and three children and will have to turn to unemployment insurance.

"I know of quite a few unemployed bakers on the Island and the mainland," he said.

NEED PLACE 'TO HANG AROUND'

Youth Group May Fold Without Council Help

Disappointed by the argument at Sidney council this week over location of teen-age headquarters, Sidney Youth Council president Gene Jackson says his organization may soon be disbanded.

"People need a place to hang around together and without a centre we will just have to pack up," he said.

A November fire gutted the drop-in centre at Sidney town hall and shortly after that council directed municipal staff members to try to find an alternative location. Members of the recreation commission, building inspector Hans Schneider and Ald. Norma Sealey discussed the problem with youth council members in a room made available by Sanscha.

A suggestion has been made that a 12-by-54 lean-to behind the hall be improved to provide a drop-in centre and has been approved in principle by Sanscha directors.

But at Sidney council meeting, the idea bogged down. One alderman denounced the drop-in as "obsolete" and another worried about supervision.

The proposal was returned to committee for study.

NOTHING TO OFFER

"We now have between 20 and 30 turning out once a week to our meetings in Sanscha," said Jackson.

"We used to have 175 members but we have nothing to offer them. At the moment they just listen to me talk."

The only other place in Sidney where kids can congregate is a pool hall "and that isn't so good," he said.

The young president thinks his executive has licked a disciplinary problem caused by younger teen-agers at the centre last year.

"If we get a place," says Jackson, "we will put 13- to 15-year-olds on a probationary basis with membership as a reward for good behavior."

MORE SUPERVISION

The executive also agreed with the need for more supervision and would like to work with young adults and ideally married couples in their early 20s.

Meanwhile, youth council is continuing with money-raising activities which it hopes will cover renovation expenses. If the centre is denied them, Jackson says "I guess we will turn it over to a community project but I sure wish council would first meet with us to discuss things."

TRUSTEE COOL TO MERGER IDEA

Sooke school district is big enough already and doesn't need or desire to amalgamate with anyone, trustee Mrs. W. W. Reader said Tuesday.

"We are plenty big enough right now and any suggestion that we increase our area is just plain stupid."

Sooke school district administers 640 square miles.

The remark was sparked by a letter from Saanich district school board "which extends an invitation to join with this district in requesting the B.C. School Trustees' Association to undertake a feasibility study on the possibilities of school district amalgamation."

Mill Seeks Permit To Dump Effluent

Canadian Cellulose Co. Ltd. has applied for provincial government approval to discharge 71.4 million gallons of pulp mill effluent a day from its Watson Island operation near Prince Rupert.

Approval is sought for the discharge, already taking place, in three applications published in the British Columbia Gazette.

The company has applied to discharge 57.6 gallons of waste daily from under the mill dock in Porpoise Harbor and eventually into Chatham Sound after it has received primary treatment in a clarifier to reduce settleable suspended solids by at least 90 per cent.

The application for nine million gallons of discharge a day into Wainwright Basin and eventually into Chatham Sound states that all wastes will be deposited in a lagoon where more than 90 per cent removal of settleable suspended solids will occur.

The application for 4.8 million gallons a day into Chatham Sound near Ridley Island states that this waste will receive inplant countercurrent washing to reduce effluent volume and fibre content.

U.K. Pay Inquiry Rejects Union Claim

LONDON (AP) — British government anti-inflation policy to cut big pay demands in industry was given a powerful boost today when a court of inquiry rejected a wage claim by electricity workers.

The tribunal said most of the 120,000 men in the industry should get £2 ($5) a week more, the raise offered two months ago by the state-run Electricity Council.

The findings—in the form of recommendations — were expected to set the stage for renewed talks between the council and unions. The unions are free to strike if they reject the findings, but a walkout would face adverse public opinion backed by the board's report.

A nationwide go-slow to back the unions' defand for an extra £5 a week dimmed out Britain for eight days last December. Large areas of the country were spasmodically hit by total blackouts that disrupted home, office and factory life.

The decision by the Wilberforce board—named after its chairman, Lord Wilberforce—will have far-reaching effects on a host of pay claims throughout Britain's economy. Some two million workers are awaiting settlements, with negotiations held off until the board reported.

EARN $80 WEEKLY

The court of inquiry decided that 43,000 men in the electricity supply industry's top two grades —foremen and highly skilled workers—should receive an extra £2 13s 6d a week. The power men earn an average of £24 ($60) a week.

The tribunal said an approximate 10-per-cent raise was justified by the industry's good productivity record. It implied that other industries with an inferior record should not get this much.

The government has said it intends to limit raises to 10 per cent in nationalized industries in hope that private employers will follow the example.

Postal workers, in the fourth week of a strike, are demanding 15 per cent. The post office has offered eight per cent.

Other claims in course of negotiation include: 300,000 nurses demanding 15 per cent; 50,000 Ford Motor Co. workers on strike for about 40 per cent; 26,000 London bus workers, 20-25 engineering draughtsmen, 40 per cent.

'DECIMAL DAY' MONDAY; BANKS CONVERTING BOOKS

LONDON (AP) — Britain's 14,500 banks close tonight for four days to convert the country to a new kind of currency.

After 12 centuries of complicated coinage—pennies, shillings, half crowns and florins —Britain is changing its money to the decimal system, bringing it into line with dollars, yen, francs and other world currencies.

Decimal Day, or D-Day, is Monday. From then on the ancient pound sterling will be divided into 100 new pence instead of the 240 pennies and 20 shillings of old.

To get the changeover process started, thousands of bank clerks tonight begin rewriting cheques, credit documents and statements into the new system. When the banks reopen Monday every bank account in the country should be converted to decimals.

The banks estimate that the paperwork and conversion of account machines into decimals will cost them $19 million.

Starting on D-Day, the market will be flooded with 3.4 billion new bronze decimal coins—the halfpenny, the new penny and the new two-pence. The pound is worth $2.50, and under the old style of money the shilling, representing one-twentieth of a pound, is worth 12½ cents.

SIMPLIFIES SYSTEM

The new coinage vastly simplifies the old system because Britons will count in 10s rather than a mixture of 12s and 20s.

But confusion is expected.

For the next 18 months, until decimalization is complete, the new coins will circulate side by side with the old.

Foes and Supporters Dissatisfied Over Inadequate Snowmobile Laws

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Snowmobiles — are they expensive nuisances, a menace to human and wild life, or are they useful vehicles that can also provide outdoor recreation for whole families?

The question is sure to spark controversy in New York state, with the number of these popular new vehicles growing each season. It now is estimated at 120,000.

Complaints against the vehicles have included accusations that they damage property and wildlife, make tranquil areas noisy, bring litter to otherwise almost inaccessible areas, permit more efficient poaching, violate trespass laws, ruin ski trails, and are dangerous to driver, passenger and bystander alike.

Despite the apparent growth in popularity of the vehicles, a new state law regulating their use has been attacked by both foes and fans as inadequate and poorly written.

Basically, the law calls for snowmobile registration and puts limits on the areas where they may be used. These restrictions, at times supplemented by local ordinances, attempt to keep the vehicles off public highways, except roadways designated "uncongested" and left unplowed for snowmobiles.

CRITICIZES LAW

Paul Schaefer of Schenectady, a Capital District Park commissioner and president of the Adirondack-Upper Hudson River Association, is a conservationist who thinks there is "vast room for improvement" in the new law.

"I am especially anxious that the larger wilderness areas be free of mechanized travel of any kind," said Schaefer.

In the Adirondack and Catskill preserves, says Schaefer, only wilderness areas of 10,000 or more acres are protected from the snow vehicles.

Regional park commissions govern the use of the vehicles in state parks, 47 of which now have snowmobile trails.

One official said that the snowmobiles conflict with trail skiing — and sometimes aid lawbreakers.

"For a few, these vehicles are a more efficient way of disobeying the law — they can take game in remote areas, for example."

Looting of hunting lodges and summer homes by snowmobile bandits also has been reported.

Some Facts on Forcing Blooms

By HILDA BEASTALL

Success with the forcing into bloom of spring flowering shrubs depends on being acquainted with a few gardening facts. Since these are learned by observation as much as by participation, anyone may accumulate the facts. You will notice that the shrub or tree material offered for sale during winter is mainly from early spring blooming plants. Others such as mimosa and roses are grown on the plants in warm greenhouses, locally or elsewhere.

Hilda

Forsythia, plum and almond, quince, Daphne mezereum (the paler forms are more fragrant), yellow jasmine, and the grey "pussies" of willow are commonly seen and are among the first to bloom in gardens.

They need only comparable temperatures and humidity indoors for us to force them into even earlier bloom. Flower buds were initiated last year, have developed during cool winter days and now, after the short periods of night frost in January and February, they are ready to open if conditions are just right.

Before cutting any material, look at the branches carefully for flower buds. Forsythia as one instance, has none on young light brown canes grown last year. Older canes of two to three years are greyish, bearing brown-sheathed flower buds towards the ends.

The flowers of the quince shrub, Chaenomeles lagenaria, can already be seen tight against the older wood. Try a piece or two of this indoors; if the flowers are brick red outdoors, they will delight and surprise you by opening apple blossom pink indoors.

Woody shrub branches must be helped to take up water, so we hammer or crush the bottom two or three inches. Next, if no blossoms are open lay the branches flat in a tub of slightly warm water for about 20 minutes, totally submerged.

This water bath needs to be warmer than tepid, but not hot.

Stand the branches in deep vases of the same temperature water and allow them to drip drain before putting them into a 65 to 70 deg. F. room in good light but not sunshine. In a week or less according to their kind, these early spring shrubs will be opening their flowers.

These are usually followed by the freshest of bright green leaves, and if you top the water level each day with warm water you should get a couple of weeks pleasure from a vase full of branches. Keep the kinds of shrubs separate for best effect, since opening times will be different.

If no progress is apparent after the third day, take the laggard branch out; cut two inches from the bottom; crush or split for two inches more; lay in warm water, then into a deep vase again. This time it may work, or you may have chosen non-flowering wood. Experience will teach, as will observation.

Pulp, Paper Goes to Court Over New Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada at MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac mill near Nanaimo started court action Monday to compel the company to sign a contract that was negotiated nearly five months ago.

The action stems indirectly from the PPWC Gold River local's refusal to sign the industry-wide agreement, which has left the 4,500 union members across the province without retroactive pay.

The pulp and paper industrial relations bureau, bargaining for the industry, says the contract cannot take effect until all eight union locals have signed.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

FRED L. KARPIN

This deal is presented to you as a "mystery." You are informed that South misplayed his slam contract, and thereby lost a slam that he should have made. It is your job, as a bridge detective, to bring South's mistake to light.

North-South vulnerable East deals.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
2◇	3♠	Pass	6♠
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

West's opening heart lead was won by South's queen, after which the queen and jack of trumps were cashed. A club lead to dummy's ace was made next (presumably in the hope that East had been dealt the singleton queen). The South hand was then re-entered via the heart ace. Declarer now led a club and finessed dummy's jack.

As is apparent, East captured the jack with the queen. He returned the diamond king to dummy's ace. Although South was able to discard one of his diamonds on the club king, he eventually lost a diamond trick to East's queen. What was declarer's mistake?

When West opened the jack of hearts at trick one, East rated to have a seven-card suit for his pre-emptive three diamond call: If West had possessed a singleton diamond, he surely would have led it. And East's diamonds were obviously headed by the king and queen. By utilizing this knowledge, South could have guaranteed his slam contract.

After drawing trumps, South should have cashed his ace of hearts, thereby eliminating hearts from both the North and South hands. Next would come the ace and king of clubs. This would be followed by the ruffing of dummy's jack of clubs. The club suit would now have been eliminated from both the North and South hands.

Dummy would then be entered via the king of trumps, and the three of diamonds would be led towards South's jack. East, of course, would win this trick — and, simultaneously, East would become the victim of an end play.

If East played back a heart (or, in theory, a club if he had one), South would discard a diamond from his own hand as he ruffed the trick in dummy. The rest of the tricks would belong to South.

And if East returned a low diamond instead, South would put up his jack, knowing that East had been dealt both the king and queen of diamonds. With the jack winning, South would then claim his slam contract.

By E.A.H. HUNTER

Greg was busy in the back yard when Ted looked in. "Eve wanted a change," he said. "She didn't like this square bit of lawn, so I'm making it seven feet longer one way and five shorter the other way."

"Still a rectangle," Ted commented. "But bigger area, eh?"

"I guess so," replied Greg. "It'll be 325 square feet in all."

What was the area of the original square?

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1971 —PAGE 45

Loffmark Rules Out 'Abortion on Demand'

There can be no "abortion on demand" policy in British Columbia even with changes in abortion laws, Health Minister Ralph Loffmark told the legislature Tuesday.

"The best we can hope for is that abortion procedures will be handled just the same as any other surgical or medical procedure," Loffmark said.

"The doctor can no more do an abortion on demand than an appendectomy on demand," he said. Every operation must be justified on a medical basis.

★ ★ ★

The minister declined to express his personal opinion on the question of whether abortion should be removed from the criminal code, but noted there are "defects" in the current law.

"An undesirable ritual of evidence" similar to that which developed in divorce cases when adultery was the only grounds for divorce is in danger of establishing itself in abortion cases, Loffmark said.

A woman might testify before an abortion committee that she will kill herself if she has her baby, Loffmark said. "This is a poor way for the law to develop."

★ ★ ★

He urged the legislators to consider the plight of doctors and nurses who are trained to save lives and now find themselves faced with an increased number of abortions where they are asked to stop what is undeniably "the same state of life" as they often save in premature births.

People should understand that many doctors have a "natural aversion" to abortions, he said.

Loffmark said more abortions per capita — an estimated 3,000 cases last year — are being performed in B.C. than in other parts of Canada.

He said he would relay to Ottawa the views of both sides of the "profound and sincere difference of opinion" on the abortion issue.

He noted that new facilities to help ease the abortion load had recently been authorized for Victoria and similar facilities would soon be approved for Vancouver.

Howard McDiarmid (SC-Alberni) said he agreed with Dr. Scott Wallace (SC — Oak Bay) that hospital abortion committees are mere "rubber stamps." He said abortion should be a matter between a woman and her doctor.

McDiarmid called for abortions on an out-patient basis, saying this is perfectly safe when done properly. This procedure would reduce the load on hospitals as well, he added.

The minister said about 100 cases of rubella infections in pregnant women had been detected in the past seven months by the governments HI test program.

★ ★ ★

"Therapeutic abortions were performed ... the number of defective births was reduced by 100 . . ."

Only one of an undisclosed number of defective births in the recent months was attributed to rubella, Loffmark said.

There is currently no uniform opinion on the best way to combat rubella effects — whether by mass inoculations or by other means — but until the matter is decided by a national meeting of health authorities the provincial government will proceed with its inoculation program, he said.

Loffmark also announced he had authorized a new hospital for Vancouver called the Greater Vancouver District Hospital which would likely undertake as a specialty the treatment of drug and alcohol addicts.

Tonight's Top Television Shows

CABLEVISION 10 PROGRAMS: 7 p.m., Ladies First; 7:30 p.m., Project Travel; 8 p.m., world sports films; 8:30 p.m., Victoria Outdoormen — motor sports with host Gordie Tupper; 9 p.m. The Prime Resource; 9:30 p.m., Our World — Let's Face It.

★ ★ ★

SINGALONG JUBILEE: 7:30 p.m., Channel 2. Songs include Pastures of Plenty, London Girls, Kinda Wish I Had, In My Life, Act Naturally and Teach Your Children. Jim Bennet, Michael Scott, Fred McKenna, Bill Langstroth and the Jubilee Singers.

★ ★ ★

THE COURTSHIP OF EDDIE'S FATHER: 7:30 p.m., Channel 4. Former astronaut Gordon Cooper brings a touch of outer space to the show tonight. When Eddie (Brandon Cruz) asks the former astronaut to lunch, Cooper accepts, surprising everyone but Eddie. Also featured are regulars Bill Bixby and Miyoshi Umeki and guests Kristina Holland and Bill Fiore.

★ ★ ★

MEN AT LAW: 7:30 p.m., Channel 7. Trying to appear topical, the revised "Storefront Lawyers" deals with a revolutionary group and a bombing. Devlin McNeil (Gerald S. O'Loughlin) agrees to defend an old client's daughter (Meg Foster) who has been charged with homicide. Her case is complicated when her boyfriend (John Rubinstein) threatens the deputy district attorney (Felice Orlandi).

★ ★ ★

THE MEN FROM SHILOH: 7:30 p.m., Channel 5. It looks like all-star night on "The Men from Shiloh." Guests stars are Van Johnson, Dina Merrill, Ruth Roman and Chill Wills. The Virginian (James Drury) tries to find the person responsible for the death of a widow's (Miss Merrill's) herd of cattle.

THE JOHNNY CASH SHOW. 9 p.m., Channel 4. Minnie Pearl, the plain Jane from Grinders Switch, Tenn., joins Johnny tonight in a special country-style comedy show. Minnie (her real name is Sarah Ophelia Colley and she really is from Tennessee) plays the farmer's daughter in a new version of the travelling salesman story. Johnny's other guests include Jim Nabors, George Lindsay, Homer and Jethro, Archie Campbell, the Dillards, Ferlin Husky, Junior Samples and Stringbean.

★ ★ ★

COMEDY SPECIAL: 9 p.m., Channel 2 and 6. Dinah Christie, Tom Kneebone, Roderick Cook and cast offer a television version of the stage smash Oh Coward! It's a revue of Noel Coward's droll wit, including some of his lyrics from the Twenties and Thirties.

★ ★ ★

KRAFT MUSIC HALL: 9 p.m., Channel 5. If you're a country-and-western fan, this could be frustrating, with Eddy Arnold and Johnny Cash in the same time spot. The Music Hall tonight presents Eddy in "Eddy Arnold and the Young Americans" with, naturally, the Young Americans, Loretta Lynn, Marty Robbins, and, for laughts, David Frye.

★ ★ ★

MEDICAL CENTRE: 9 p.m., Channel 12. Jack Carter is tonight's guest star as (what else?) a funnyman, but with a difference. He is an entertainer who volunteers to help a girl who has tried to commit suicide, unaware that he is seriously ill. Chad Everett and James Daly star.

★ ★ ★

FOUR-IN-ONE: THE PSYCHIATRIST: 10 p.m., Channel 5. Starring Roy Thinnes as Dr. James Whitman and Luther Adler as Dr. Bernard Altman. In "The Private World of Martin Dalton," Thinnes tries to reach 12-year-old Stephen Hudis who has slipped into a fantasy world he refuses to leave. With Jim Hutton, Kate Woodville, Pamelyn Ferdin.

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

Until some 30 years ago, when antibiotics became available, rheumatic fever was a much-dreaded disease, because it attacked children, and commonly was followed by injury to the heart and perhaps to some of the joints. Today, things are very different. With the help of a speical penicillin, the incidence of heart damage and death after rheumatic fever has gone way down.

But today the doctor often has to teach the parents not to keep telling the child who has had rheumatic fever to quiet down and not to exercise, not to run, and not to play. Also the doctor has to keep telling the parents of these children that just because a child has had a spell of rheumatic fever, he doesn't have to have heart disease. The cause is usually an infection with what is called a streptococcus, a germ which grows in chains (Strepto in Greek refers to a chain). Today, with the help of penicillin, doctors can kill the streptococci and commonly put a nend to the disease.

Dr. Arnold J. Sameroff, at the University of Rochester in New York, says that there is a difference in temperament of babies from the time that they are born. For example, one baby will seldom cry, it will eat regularly, sleep well, and play peacefully. Another baby will cry a lot, will eat irregularly, sleep erratically and may be too active. Some babies seem to have bad tempers. Dr. Sameroff says what I have often concluded, that the difficult baby was probably just born that way. Often, when women have told me about a bad-tempered child that they were having problems with, I have found in taking a history from the mother that bad temper seemed to run through the family, affecting several members. Sometimes the medicines diphenylhydantoin or deanol will greatly quiet the overly active child.

I occasionally get a letter from someone wondering if a man in his 80's or 90's can still impregnate a woman. This ought to be possible, because men do not go through a menopause in which the reproducrive organs actually change, as a woman does. I was interested to see that recently, Dr. Joseph T. Freeman wrote about a man of 94, who in 1935 was reported as "a case of authenticated fertility." After a second marriage with a widow of 27, a child was born to them. In his first marriage of 53 years, he had 16 children.

The man was said to be normal with an excellent general behavior; his emotional state was euphoric, and his orientation, memory, intelligence and judgment were very good.

What was important was that his sperm count showed 65 per cent of the normal expected number of spermatozoa.

'I'll Talk To Top Man' —Skillings

Trade and Industry Minister Waldo Skillings said Tuesday he will only talk with the "top echelon" of the Toyota Motor Sales Co. Ltd. on the possible construction of a car assembly plant on the lower mainland.

He made the comment after Opposition Leader Dave Barrett discussed the proposal Tuesday morning with K. Fujita, Toronto-based liaison officer for the Japanese firm, and Takakana Mitsui, director of Canadian Motor Industries, the distributor of Toyota cars in Canada.

Fujita had told Barrett his firm plans establishing a new pier in Vancouver harbor to serve a new carrier which would bring 2,500 units on its monthly trips between Japan and B.C. The pier would include a warehouse to provide storage for cars and parts to serve Canada coast to coast.

Funnel Revenue Surpluses Into Work Projects—NDP

The provincial government should start funnelling its vast revenue surpluses into municipal works projects, a New Democrat MLA said Tuesday.

Leo Nimsick, (NDP — Kootenay) told the legislature the Socreds always run to the federal government attempting to get money for projects they can afford to finance on their own.

Nimsick was referring to a federal $35-million loan to municipalities in B.C.

"Why don't they (the Socreds) loan the municipalities money at low interest rates for job-creating? Why do we always have to run to the federal government for money?" Nimsick said.

Tax increases announced during the budget speech Friday, he said, are not based upon ability to pay. Most of the revnue from cigarette sales and gasoline will be paid by average wage earners.

Nimsick attacked the guaranteed income, advocated in the budget speech, as being a step to a "glorified welfare state." Instead, he said the government should permit pensioning at earlier ages, say 55 years, to bring young people into the economy.

Nimsick said he has listened to 22 budget speeches, most of which could be described as "tedious and repetitious."

He charged that British Columbians would pay $144 million this year in interest charges for indirect provincial debts.

"You transferred the payment of this interest from the treasury to the people out there."

"You don't know what you're talking about," said Public Works Minister W. N. Chant.

"Bring in the books. Let's have the facts," said Opposition Leader Dave Barrett.

Speaker William Murray called for Nimsick to stop when, on a point of order, Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell asked that Nimsick's interest figures be tabled.

But Nimsick brought the opposition benches into an uproar when he revealed that he had been quoting the budget speech.

"Give him a budget speech," laughed Barrett, looking at Campbell.

In other parts of his speech, Nimsick warned that regional district boards are not democratically elected, but appointed by participating municipal councils.

He said their costs continue to rise as the province shifts away from itself and to the regional districts, responsibilities it should retain.

Nimsick also attacked the government's assessment policy. He said it discriminated against small property owners, particularly people on fixed incomes, while favoring large landowners.

For example, he said, lands owned by Crows Nest Industries are assessed at an average of between $2 and $8 an acre, and cited similar statistics for lands owned by the Kaiser company.

This policy "discriminates" against small homeowners, Nimsick charged and he proposed elimination of the homeowner grant by increasing assessments to large property owners.

Tenure to Be Studied

The New Democrats tried unsuccessfully Tuesday to ask the legislature's standing committee on social welfare and education to study education finances.

The attempt followed Education Minister Donald Brothers' motion to have the committee study tenure procedures. It passed unanimously, but the NDP amendment was ruled out of order.

The result is that the committee will hold its first business meeting since 1953.

Eileen Dailly (NDP-Burnaby-North) tried to amend the motion so that the committee could study the provincial finance formula for school boards.

Gordon Dowding (NDP—Burnaby-Edmonds) told the house the formula forces school boards to restrict teachers appointments and has a direct effect on tenure.

But Speaker William Murray ruled the amendment out of order because he said it did not appear in written form on the order paper as required.

Brothers said a tour of B.C. last year showed him that many people in education were interested in tenure procedures.

Trustees Demand Contract For Health Board Services

Greater Victoria's senior public health officer said Tuesday he is fed up with health services being a political football bounced between municipal and provincial governments.

But Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread apologized to the members of the Greater Victoria metropolitan board of health a moment later, noting they had provided continuous support for him in a lengthy struggle with the provincial government to get adequate staff.

His sharp comment came after Dr. Philip Ney, trustee for the Greater Victoria school board, confirmed that the school board doesn't intend continuing on the same basis with the health board as in years past.

SEEK CONTRACT

Trustees want a contract, which could be renewed annually and which will specify services to be provided and their cost, said Ney, the school board's new representative on the health board.

His comments reflect a long-standing dissatisfaction by the school board with the extent of services provided by the health board.

Ney said trustees believe they are entitled to certain services and if the health board staff can't provide them, the school board believes it has the right to try and contract for them elsewhere.

DOING TESTS

The health board hasn't been able to get provincial funds to hire such specialists as an audiologist, speech therapist, psychologists and psychiatrist. Whitbread has pointed out repeatedly staff shortages in these and other areas are hamstringing the health board staff.

But Whitbread did say at Tuesday's health board meeting that public health nurses were undertaking tests in the schools and the school district was getting all the services the health board is required to provide.

The matter of health board services to the school district was tabled until a letter from the school district is received. It will specify what services trustees want and ask for a statement of their costs.

School board contributions represent about a third of the health board's budget. The three school districts involved contributed a little more than $178,000 last year.

Health board members took a preliminary look at the new budget Tuesday but that subject also was tabled to give representatives time to take it to their councils and school boards.

An agenda summary notes public health services are curtailed because there is a shortage of at least 12 public health nurses, nine public health inspectors and 11 clerks as well as a serious lack of para-medical staff.

"This discrimination is due to a lack of political decision," the summary said. "Provision of staff and updating of services should not be delayed until regionalization takes place."

The summary, presumably written by Whitbread, says the health board has been discriminated against for five years because staff increases have not been made to match population growth.

Recreation Body Active

The Oak Bay Recreation Action Group's canvass to gain support for a major recreation centre swings into its third night tonight with close to 200 volunteers in action.

Archie Courtnall, director of canvassers, said today: "Things are going much better than we expected and we'll be finished well within the two-week period we planned."

Health Policies 'Lack Progress'

The president of the Registered Nurses' Association of B.C. said Tuesday the provincial government's health policies lack any progressive steps and there is tremendous dissatisfaction among nurses.

Mrs. Monica Angus of Coquitlam was in Victoria to hear Health Minister Ralph Loffmark speak in the legislature.

"We and other groups have been urging the development of intermediate care under a comprehensive health scheme but this seems as far away as ever," she said.

"Our members are daily faced with the problems of the old and infirm. The services that are available don't meet their needs."

The most serious problem in health care is the province-wide shortage of hospital beds which means those patients who are in hospital are more seriously ill and require more intensive nursing.

"There is a tremendous amount of dissatisfaction among nurses," said Mrs. Angus.

Water Diversion Study Urged

Willis Jefcoat (SC—Shuswap) Tuesday asked the provincial government not to consider any proposals for diversions of water from the Shuswap-Thompson systems into the Okanagan basin until full studies of all possible effects are carried out.

Jefcoat said the studies should consider industrial, recreational, ecological and other uses of the water which might be affected by diversion.

$3 Million Loss If Big Game Ban Imposed

A ban on big game hunting would mean a $3 million revenue loss to the province, civil service layoffs and closure of some sporting-goods stores, James Chabot (SC — Columbia River) said Tuesday.

Chabot told the legislature he did not agree with another Scored backbencher's (Bert Price, SC — Vancouver Burrard) call for a ban on big game hunting.

Chabot said the lost revenue would come from hunting licence fees. Moreover, 200 civil servants would lose their jobs, he said.

"The time has come," he said, "to examine ways to maintain the big game population in British Columbia."

Premature Spoiler Deployment Caused Air Crash—Report

By BOB DOUGLAS

OTTAWA (CP) — Blame was spread widely Tuesday in the official inquiry on a July 5 Air Canada crash near Toronto that took the lives of all 109 people aboard the DC-8 jetliner.

In a report tabled in the Commons by Transport Minister Don Jamieson, Mr. Justice Hugh Gibson of the Exchequer Court of Canada confirmed premature deployment of a landing-brake system as the crash cause and specified no outstanding contribution by any one party.

His 214-page report dated Jan. 29 said the crash was due to failures by Captain Peter Hamilton of the flight crew; First Officer Donald Rowland; McDonnell Douglas, the aircraft manufacturer; Air Canada; and the transport department, which has regulatory responsibility for flight safety.

Mr. Jamieson refused comment Tuesday until he had a chance to discuss the report further with department officials and McDonnell Douglas withheld comment until officials were able to read and assess the report.

It singles out the "ground spoiler" braking system as the main cause of the crash and recommends steps which McDonnell Douglas and Air Canada can take to prevent recurrence.

Ground spoilers are steel panels that swing up from the wings of the DC-8 jet, after the wheels have touched the runway, to slow and steady the aircraft.

The transport department is criticized for accepting the system and for allowing non-uniform flight manuals.

First Officer Rowland prematurely employed the spoiler air brake while the plane was 60 feet above Malton airport in a landing procedure, the report confirmed. The aircraft dropped, hit hard enough to lose an engine, took off again and then crashed.

The report said a shift in landing routine worked out privately between Capt. Hamilton and the first officer and followed until the fatal landing effort, led to the mistake through "force of habit." It added:

"If the captain, on the day of this accident, had ordered the first officer to cause the ground spoilers to be armed in the manner laid down in the Air Canada . . . operating manual, then this accident would not have happened, even if the first officer had through force of habit, when flying with this captain, not armed them . . ."

CONTRARY TO RULES

The report said that Capt. Hamilton's custom was to employ the ground spoilers only after the aircraft had landed, contrary to Air Canada instructions to cock or "arm" them in the landing approach for deployment when the wheels touched.

The captain's practice was due to fear the spoiler brakes might begin operating prematurely.

Air Canada procedure normally was followed by Mr. Rowland, when he was in command of the aircraft and Capt. Hamilton was acting as co-pilot.

But on this occasion, as tape recordings of the landing showed, Capt. Hamilton as pilot allowed Mr. Rowland to cock the landing-brake device in the air, the report said. It said the lever was pulled inadvertently in such a way—and the engineering of the mechanism is criticized—that the spoiler system went into operation prematurely.

The jetliner, an elongated DC-8-63, was flying from Montreal to Los Angeles with a stop at Toronto.

When the aircraft hit the runway, the outer right engine tore off, rupturing the fuel tank and exposing live wires. The engine attachments to the wing were supposed to break cleanly under such circumstances without ripping open the fuel tank.

The plane rebounded into the air and Capt. Hamilton decided to circle back for a second landing attempt.

The wires dangling in the vaporized fuel may have caused the three mid-air explosions that preceded the plane's plunge into a farmer's field five miles north of the airport, the report said.

Police Court

Three young men stopped by police in a car last November with a pair of women's gloves, a hammer, two tire wrenches, a hunting knife, a straight razor and a gas pistol were sentenced Tuesday to nine months each in prison for possession of house-breaking tools.

Judge William Ostler found Stephen J. Bradley, 24, of 471 Audley, Robert J. Duff, 24, of no fixed address, and John G. Flett, 20, of 471 Audley, guilty following a trial.

The three and a woman were stopped by officers in a car on Cook early Nov. 17.

The officers found the gloves and knife in the glove compartment, one wrench in the trunk, the other under the front seat with the razor and the hammer on the back seat floor.

One of the accused was sitting on the gun.

Flett, the driver, testified during the trial that the gloves were his girl friend's and the knife he had left in the vehicle and not used for some time.

He said the hammer was a friend's and was to be returned and the pistol he left in the car to be refueled.

Ostler said in his judgment while the articles by themselves were innocent enough he found it inconceivable for the accused to have a such a collection of tools in a car in the early morning hours.

Ostler also disputed Flett's testimony, saying the accused had his story "too pat."

Bradley had a previous record of breaking and entering with intent and breaking, entering and theft.

Flett's record included assault causing bodily harm, theft, and possession of a spring knife. Duff had convictions of theft over $50, shoplifting and breaking, entering and theft.

Eileen Hindson, 40, of 707 Linden, was given a suspended sentence and placed on one-year probation on a charge of setting fires.

The accused had been observed in her home Dec. 1 with a white plastic container shortly before a fire was located on a landing.

Ostler noted that the offence was "serious" but added that he did not think the woman had acted in cold deliberation or with any plan.

He said he thought she acted "in the grip of emotion."

He said she had done so to rid herself of tenants in a situation somewhat intolerable.

Russell J. Eveleigh, 56, of 945 Selkirk, was fined a total of $500 when he pleaded guilty to impaired driving and refusing to provide a sample of his breath for analysis.

He was stopped by police on Esquimalt Road Feb. 8 about 10:40 p.m. after his car had hit a utility pole.

Ostler fined him $400 for the first charge and $100 for the second. He suspended the accused's licence.

Rivals Claim Pressure Used On Delegates

TORONTO (CP) — The convention to choose a successor to retiring Premier John Robarts opened today amid claims that supporters of at least one candidate have brought establishment pressure to bear on delegates.

Top officials representing three of the five cabinet ministers in the running said in interviews Tuesday night that pressure tactics have been used, although they gave no specific instances.

Walter Baker, campaign manager for A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, said members of the legislature who support Education Minister William Davis were responsible for the tactics.

Although the other officials declined to pin the blame, they agreed the tactics went beyond normal attempts to delegate persuasion.

REFERS TO RESENTMENT

"A tremendous resentment is developing among delegates as a result of establishment pressure on some delegates," Mr. Baker said.

"The pressure is being put on by cabinet ministers, backbenchers, etc., who support Mr. Davis."

The education minister's campaign office now believes he has the support of 12 of the 22 cabinet ministers and more than 40 of the 46 backbenchers.

John Latimer, campaign manager for Mr. Davis, said he had received "nothing out of the ordinary in the way of reports of pressure.

"We asked everybody at the start of the campaign not to over-pressure delegates; but to ensure people's rights are respected."

The comments came as the five managers of the major campaigns acknowledged that Mr. Davis was being hard-pressed by Mines Minister Allan Lawrence in the bidding for delegate support in voting Friday for a new leader of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party.

HAS SLIGHT MARGIN

There was agreement among the campaign managers, representing Mr. Davis, Allan Lawrence and Provincial Secretary Robert Welch that the two leaders each have first-ballot commitments from about 600 of the 1,748 delegates—with Mr. Davis in front by a relatively slight margin. A total of 875 votes is needed for a candidate to win.

The development of a neck-and-neck race between the two men has given added impetus to the campaigns of Mr. Welch, A. B. R. Lawrence and Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough.

The campaign managers for these three men see their candidates in the position of becoming acceptable alternatives in the event of a head-on clash between Mr. Davis and Allan Lawrence.

All five campaign managers agreed that the sixth candidate, Ottawa graduate student Robert Pharand, will be dropped after the first ballot. Although spokesmen for A. B. R. Lawrence remain confident, the opposing camps predicted he will be knocked out on the second ballot.

Robarts 'Worked For Unity'

OTTAWA (CP) — A "spirit of honest co-operation to promote and strengthen Canadian unity" marked John Robarts' nine years as Ontario premier, Prime Minister Trudeau has told him.

One of the "truly great unifying forces in Canada," Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield said.

NDP Leader T. C. Douglas says Mr. Robarts has "exerted a steadying influence by following policies of moderation and tolerance" in a time of controversy.

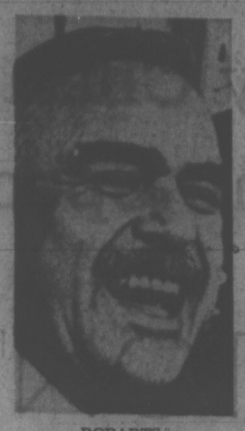

The prime minister's comments were made privately by telegram to Mr. Robarts Dec. 8, when the premier announced he would retire.

Mr. Trudeau also paid a special tribute to Mr. Robarts Monday behind the closed doors of the federal-provincial constitutional conference, before it buckled down to work.

The Dec. 8 telegram said:

"Canadians will have heard with regret the announcement of your intention to step down after more than nine years as prime minister of Ontario. Through that period, you have worked in a spirit of honest co-operation to promote and strengthen Canadian unity.

"On this occasion, I would express my own sincere appreciation for the way in which you have spoken at federal-provincial meetings and elsewhere in support of the interests of all of Canada and for your contribution in furthering communication and understanding among Canadians."

2,000 Party Faithful Gather To Pay Tribute to Robarts

By CRAIG ASPINALL

TORONTO (CP) — Some time within the next week or so, John Parmenter Robarts will walk away from Queen's Park for the last time as the political leader of one-third of Canada's population.

He has only one regret in retiring from the premiership and leadership of the Ontario Progressive Conservative party he has held since 1961.

"It breaks my heart to think that I'll never walk in that legislature again just before the question period, without knowing what I'm going to be asked.

"That was the part of the job I really enjoyed most."

Tonight, the 53-year-old premier will be in the public spotlight above all others for perhaps the last time.

More than 2,000 party members from across the province will gather in the Royal York Hotel to pay him tribute before getting on with the task of choosing his successor.

PREMIERS PRESENT

Also on hand will be two other symbols of party power which has been unbroken in the province since 1943. Former premiers George Drew and Leslie Frost, now in their 70s, will be on the podium, as will national party leader Robert Stanfield.

Flanking them will be the men who hope to don the mantle of the premiership: Education Minister William Davis, Municipal Affairs Minister Darcy McKeough, Mines Minister Allan Lawrence, Provincial Secretary Robert Welch, A. B. R. (Bert) Lawrence, minister of financial and commercial affairs, and Ottawa graduate student Robert Pharand.

When the last speech has been made and the last toast drunk, Mr. Robarts will begin to prepare for his departure, for a return to the law practice in his home riding of London.

Also foremost in the premier's mind in deciding to give up the reins of power has been his family, the wife and teen-age son and daughter who have remained well away from the rough and tumble of his political life.

"I've teen-age children at home—the old man should be home occasionally," he said in announcing his retirement in December.

WANTS TO PRACTISE

Although there has been speculation over the years that Mr. Robarts might at some point to be in line for the national party leadership, or for a seat in the senate, he has given no indication he wants to do anything more than go back to the law.

"My name is still on the door," he says in reference to his law office in London, where he has represented the riding of London North for the last 19 years.

ALL EYES ON QUEBEC

Optimism is running high in Ottawa over what appears to be the successful outcome of the federal-provincial constitutional conference there this week.

Prime Minister Trudeau and the 10 provincial premiers reached agreement on a feasible formula for repatriation of Canada's constitution. See Page 2 for details.

All eyes will be on Quebec between now and the June conference in Victoria, because it was that province which caused the Fulton-Favreau constitutional amendment formula to be scrapped.

Following this week's conference Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa expressed some optimism but refused to make firm comment until the new formula is discussed in the Quebec legislature. Story on Page 2.

Stage Set For Historic Victoria Meet

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The nation's government leaders Tuesday set the stage for turning their next meeting June 14-16 in Victoria into an event equalling the historic Charlottetown conference of the last century.

The participants at the latter became known as the "fathers of confederation."

If the participants at Victoria fulfill the surprisingly strong and broad promise evoked by their two-day meeting here, they could go down in Canadian history as the "fathers of the constitution."

Jubilation Among the Ranks

Prime Minister Trudeau's elated "great breakthrough" claim for the surprisingly substantial progress reflected the jubilation that permeates the ranks of an army of experts and officials who have been preparing the groundwork for the past three years.

Some have seen an analogy between the Charlottetown conference and the one coming in Victoria. Most appear to believe that this week's meetings have finally set the bandwagon rolling towards establishment of the first properly-framed constitution in Canada, based on an extensive rewriting and expansion of the script outline in the British North America Act.

Many agree with the prime minister that the real push came from ordinary Canadians who have turned out 7,000-strong already at some 40 meetings held in 25 cities since September by the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution.

Their Message Got Through

Their impassioned and impatient demands for changes great and small in the constitution are believed to have finally gotten some of the message through to provincial politicians that the federal-provincial talks had better start producing some results.

Co-chairman Mark MacGuigan (L-Windsor-Walkerville) today said in an interview that "the public meetings have been getting larger all the time and I think the momentum is going to keep building up."

The committee has about 20 more cities on its itinerary, including the province of Quebec, which could really turn the heat on the politicians between now and the Victoria meeting.

During its western swing, the committee drew 4,200 people to its hearings in British Columbia and Southern Alberta.

Impact on French-Canadians

The size and tolerance of the western tournouts dumbfounded many politicians. It had a major impact on French-Canadians and may well have made it possible for Premier Bourassa to accept an amending formula and the projected outline of a constitution as "feasible approaches."

The parliamentary committee's turnouts during its Quebec hearings this spring may turn out to be as crucial as the western swing in revealing even in French-Canada a strengthening demand for achieving a constitution which would bolster Bourassa's position for actually signing an agreement in Victoria.

Trudeau, pointing out that the committee had uncovered a stronger public feeling than anyone had been aware of, said the committee's continuing hearings would be watched with interest.

"I think the conclusions reached at the federal-provincial conference yesterday are useful not only in that they probably will be the basis for ultimate agreement on a constitution by the governments but also because they create a pause between the the governments," MacGuigan said.

"We will be able to take a reading of public opinion on these proposals as we go throughout the country and we already have had them printed in our minutes last night so that they will be available to all those who participate in our hearings."

Bennett Pleased

VANCOUVER (CP) — Premier W. A. C. Bennett is pleased with the results of Otawa's two-day constitutional conference.

On his return to British Columbia late Tuesday, the premier told newsmen at Vancouver International Airport that the new formula to amend the constitution gives this province a key position "with just about the same powers as Quebec and Ontario when it comes to approving any changes."

STILL TEETERING is part of the second and third floors of the Veterans' Hospital in Sylmar, a Los Angeles suburb, after the devastating earthquate Tuesday. Probers today are still digging into the debris in search of buried patients. (AP Wirephoto.)

Fear of New Tremors Grips Shattered City

LOS ANGELES — The death toll climbed to 43 today from the earthquake that has left the population of the third-largest city in the United States frightened of new tremors.

More than 1,000 were injured as a result of the rumbling quake that struck at 6:01 a.m. PDT Tuesday and the hundreds of aftershocks.

Officials said 25 persons were missing, some buried in the rubble of two collapsed buildings at a Veterans Administrations hospital in the hard-hit west end of the populous San Fernando Valley.

It was too early to give a full damage estimate, but it will run in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Twenty-five bodies had been found in the hospital wreckage; 45 persons were rescued. One hundred persons were injured.

So heavy and so interlocked were huge chunks of concrete from the virtually levelled three-storey structures that rescuers said it might be another day or more before all victims could be reached.

HEAR CRIES FOR HELP

Although cries of "Help me! Help me!" could be heard Tuesday night, authorities said there was little likelihood of more survivors being found. The bodies of five persons were extricated in the night and early morning hours.

Some 400,000 Canadians who emigrated to California live in the populous Los Angeles area.

The panic and confusion, and the many fires that broke out when gas mains were fractures, led to nine deaths due to heart attacks.

President Nixon declared the quake-stricken scene a disaster area, making it eligible for government help, including low-interest loans to rebuild.

National Guard troops moved into the ghost towns to prevent looting.

The main shock Tuesday was centred 26 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

It crumpled much of the concrete facing the 150-foot-high dam of Van Norman Lakes, the city's largest reservoir, and cracked its

Ky Threatens Thrust Into North Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — Two thousand more South Vietnamese troops crossed into Laos today, and Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky threatened a drive into North Vietnam.

U.S. and South Vietnamese helicopters lifted the fresh Saigon troops across the border, raising the number in southern Laos to more than 10,000, field reports said.

Vietnam Press, the Saigon government's news agency, quoted Ky as saying that if necessary South Vietnamese forces may cross the 17th parallel into North Vietnam to flush out supply bases in the area.

Informed sources said several battalions of the South Vietnamese force that pushed into Laos Monday had advanced along east-west Route 9 to areas north and south of Sepone, a main North Vietnamese trans-shipment point and base area on the Ho Chi Minh trail.

The town 25 miles from the South Vietnamese border has been reported virtually deserted, and there were no immediate reports of any fighting there. The aim of the operation is to choke off the North Vietnamese troops and supplies moving down the network of jungle trails to South Vietnam and Cambodia.

NEW CLEAN-AIR BILL PROVIDES STIFF FINES

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Fines of up to $200,000 for industries found guilty of air pollution are provided for in a proposed clean air act given first reading Tuesday in the Commons.

The legislation makes the elimination of air pollution and preservation of clean air a top priority in the soon-to-be-established department of the environment.

Forestry Minister Jack Davis, who is to be in charge of the new department, said air pollution costs in Canada —including health, housing and building maintenance, laundry and cleaning costs— now amounts to $1.5 billion a year.

Under the bill, the federal government would be empowered to:

—Set national air quality objectives;

—Set national emission standards where there is a significant danger to health or where international agreements are violated.

—Prohibit the manufacture or import into Canada.

Penalties for infringing the emission standards would be as high as $200,000. Fines of up to $5,000 daily are provided for producing or importing prohibited fuels.

Federal plants would become models to follow in the fight against air pollution, Mr. Davis pledged at a news conference following the bill's introduction.

Provinces already had accepted in principle the need for national air quality objectives.

Problem with Hydro buses may be t' tell th' diff'rence b'tween reg'lar service an' a cut-back service.

Seems we've agreed t' git our constitution back t' Canada but we still hev t' agree on whut t' do with it after that.

When nature makes war, th' best y' kin hope fer is a truce, subject t' cancellation without notice.

Hydro Cuts Bus Service

New Philosophy Bared When Details Unveiled

Cutbacks in bus schedules in Victoria and Vancouver are expected to be announced later this week.

Details of schedule proposals are being withheld by B.C. Hydro until the crown corporation advises municipal councils.

Hydro's board of directors are scheduled to meet Feb. 22 to consider an increase in fares. The last increase, to 25 cents from 20 cents, was in the spring of 1970.

Gordon Shrum, Hydro chairman, said Tuesday the schedule alterations would involve a "fundamental change in our philosophy" about urban transportation.

★ ★ ★

He said the transit system was losing $4.4 million prior to wage increases for transit division workers who settled for an 18.7 per cent pay raise over 27 months after a 32-day strike.

Shrum declined to elaborate on what the changes might entail until after municipal councils have been told. Hydro will announce the changes through newspaper advertising.

The B.C. government pays a $2 million subsidy to Hydro, leaving the corporation to offset the remaining deficit from other resources.

Transit loss on Vancouver Island has been $1 million and would be $2 million after the settlement, Shrum said.

★ ★ ★

Capital Regional District chairman Hugh Curtis said today cutbacks would not be an effective way of off-setting increased transit losses.

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford were not available for comment this morning.

"It sounds very much like the CPR," Curtis said.

"It's costing too much therefore we're going to cut back. But cutbacks in schedules don't seem to be the answer."

He said decreasing frequency of bus traffic would only drive still more people away from the transit service, decreasing fare revenues and driving up subsidies.

★ ★ ★

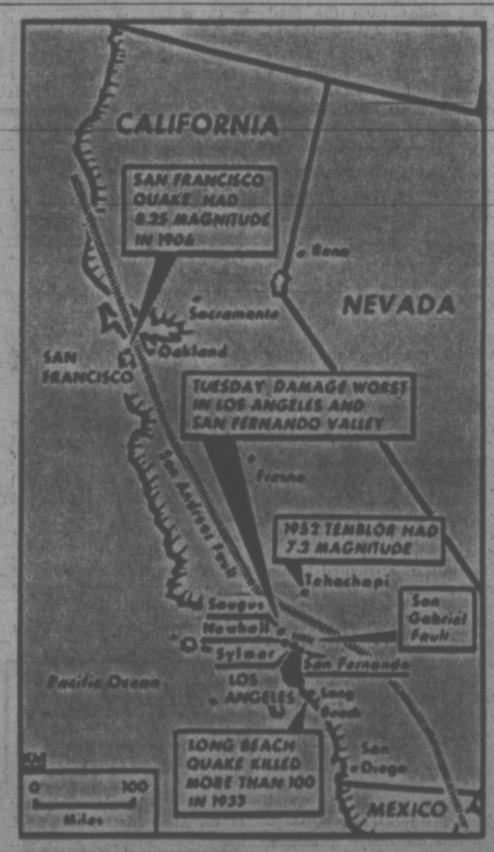

Passengers who already have to wait "30 minutes to an hour" for buses will rely on alternative modes of transportation if schedule cutbacks cause even more inconvenience, Curtis said.

"Therefore less people will use the bus and subsidies will have to increase."

He said he was no expert in public transit and did not know what the ultimate solution to transportation problems would be.

"This is just another little scene in a continuing play," he said.

Hydro deficits in transit operation are expected to top $8 million a year by 1973 unless changes are made.

CALIFORNIA QUAKES over the years are compared in this map which pinpoints such previous disasters as the 1906 San Francisco tremblor, the 1933 upheaval in Long Beach which killed more than 100 people and Tuesday's quake which was centred in a fault in the San Gabriel Mountains near Los Angeles. OVERLOAD BUSES END —HYDRO

A B.C. Hydro spokesman in Victoria said today "a number" of overload buses on various routes have been discontinued since the transit strike ended last Saturday.

No details were given.

One of the buses ran to Oak Bay Junior and Secondary High Schools twice a day.

It was patronized chiefly by students from the Cadboro Bay-Ten Mile Point area attending Oak Bay Junior and Senior Secondary Schools. It did not follow the regular Cadboro Bay bus route.

Parents in the area are reportedly upset by the fact that students now are forced to ride into the centre of town and make a transfer there, adding up to half an hour to the trip both going to school and coming home.

The B.C. Hydro spokesman said an overload bus is one which runs in addition to regular buses to absorb extra passengers.

DNA Inhibits Cancer Cells In Animals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Malignant cancer cells in laboratory rats have been restored to normal and future cancer growth inhibited, three scientists at the University of California at Los Angeles report.

Key to the finding, based on 10 years of research and experiments, was DNA, molecules in the cell which transmit genetic characteristics in the body.

The scientists said they isolated DNA molecules from the breast cancer of a rat and then incubated this DNA with live cancer cells. These cells were injected into rats and failed to produce cancer, the group said.

Dr. Richard M. Halpern; his wife, Dr. Barbara Halpern and Dr. Roberts A. Smith of the UCLA Molecular Biology Institute made the report in the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, a journal.

"We want to emphasize that all our experiments and findings so far apply only to laboratory animals and not necessarily to humans," they said.

NEWS BRIEFS

Offices Locked

MONTREAL (CP) — Downtown offices of the Confederation of National Trade Unions were still locked to all employees today as 332 former employees of the G. Lapalme Inc. mail pickup service continued their occupation.

Uniforms Banned

BELFAST (AP) — The government of Northern Ireland took legal moves against the underground Irish Republican Army today, banning uniforms of illegal organizations and making it an offence to withhold information about persons killed in riots.

ASTRONAUTS QUARANTINED

READERS' DAY

Poverty the Spur In Quebec, Ulster

By Jack Scott

Being some premature Spring desk-cleaning in which we tidy up several subjects recently under scrutiny here:

★ ★ ★

It's heartening to have so many letters showing a continuing interest and support hereabouts for the work of Dr. Norman Z. Alcock and his Canadian Peace Research Institute.

As Mrs. Nora Sharpe, of our town, puts it, "In the week of the invasion of Laos we need to be reminded that Dr. Alcock will never be a forgotten man so long as he and other scientists continue their work toward a goal of isolating, understanding and ending the causes of violence."

Several readers have sent me the recent Peace Institute pamphlet dealing with their studies of Quebec and the FLQ, a confrontation that they relate more directly to poverty and chronic unemployment than to nationality or ideology. Some excerpts:

"It is highly probable that members of the outlawed FLQ fit the mould of the American Black Panthers. Reared in poverty they are frustrated at the slowness of the elected government in reducing unemployment. Not only is unemployment in Quebec 41 per cent of Canada's total, but it has steadily risen over the past four years from 109,000 in 1967 to over 200,000 in 1970.

Scott

"The desperate men of the FLQ, like the Black Panthers, have turned to arson and murder out of a humanitarian concern for the poor. If this argument is valid then the jailed men of the FLQ are quite different from common criminals for they are driven by different emotions. . . .

"Why is there widespread sympathy for the separatist cause in Quebec? Because the large lower class in Quebec, like the large lower class of Northern Ireland, sees the small Protestant upper class as their enemy. And this upper class of Quebec is not only in league with the provincial and federal governments, it is controlled by English Canada. As the people of Quebec see it, they are not even masters of their own houses . . .

"In the long run, we require nothing less than a universal guaranteed annual wage to help overcome poverty and discrimination and once again (because of the War Measures Act) it has forcefully been brought to our attention that we Canadians require a modern constitution to guarantee personal freedoms."

Donations to help keep the Institute alive should be sent to 514 Chartwell Road, Oakville, Ontario.

Yes, as I suggested in some notes here on the problems of keeping dogs in the city, there is a population explosion of pets that's as chronic as the world's human over-population.

Helen Kerswell, Victoria representative of the America-based organization called The Animals' Crusaders, writes me that animal ownership and the breeding rate of puppies and kittens is at an all-time high in Canada and the States, creating a dangerous imbalance between the number of dogs and cats and the homes that are available to them.

The problem is acute in Victoria, as well, according to Mrs. Kerswell, but all efforts to interest the local breeders in the ABC (Animal Birth Control) methods of her group have failed. The result? "Enormous suffering for pets doomed to be homeless."

Mrs. Kerswell passes on this advice:

"The solution lies in the spaying of female animals. Spaying is not only the one certain means of preventing the nation-wide cruelty of breeding more animals than the nation is able or willing to provide homes for, but it also offers other advantages. A spayed dog or cat will not attract packs of male animals. The spayed animal is content to stay at home and is not inclined to roam and annoy the neighbors. The notion that a spayed animal will become fat or lazy is an old wives' tale. It won't if you don't over-feed it. The idea that a dog or cat should be permitted to have one litter before being spayed is equally mistaken."

Speaking of cats here's Louise Major, president of the Island Cat Fanciers, with news of their first annual championship show to be held at the Sanscha Hall in Sidney on Feb. 13 and 14, dedicated to the proposition that "cats are more than mere mousers and a nuisance to birds."

The public is invited both days any time between 1:30 and 6 o-clock. Among other exotic breeds they'll see Glynneath's Adagio, owned by Mr. and Mrs. Ivor Thomas, of Nanaimo, who was last year's All-American Siamese and No. 2 Cat of the Year, and a Rex mutant that may just be the only curly-haired cat you'll ever see.

My thanks to a number of women readers who have sent me recipes for "real, home-made bread," and one in particular, from Gayle Petersen, in Langford, worked out so well that I want to pass it along. Goes as follows:

Yeast mixture: One cup warm water; two packages of yeast; one tablespoon honey or molasses. Mix and let stand in a warm place (80 degrees or so) for 10 minutes.

Sponge mixture: Three cups of hot water; one-third cup of honey or molasses; one-and-a-half cups of whole wheat flour; four tablespoons of oil; one tablespoon of salt. Mix together. Add enough more whole wheat flour to make a stiff batter. Add the yeast mixture, mixing thoroughly. Let this sit in a warm place for 15 minutes so the flour can absorb the moisture.

Add enough more whole wheat flour to make a dough that can be handled, yet soft. Knead five minutes.

Cut dough into quarters, put each part into a buttered tin. (An empty stew tin is a good size — about 15 ounces.) Put into cold oven and turn on to 200 degrees for 25 minutes. Then set at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Turn out of tins immediately to cool.

Gayle adds two tablespoons of soya flour, a tablespoon of Brewer's Yeast and three tablespoons of corn meal, but that's optional.

A note now from the Locus Creative Leisure Society, whose founding members were interviewed in this corner.

"Because our work is being constantly misunderstood we feel it necessary to explain briefly what the objectives of the society are," the letter goes. "Contrary to what many people already think, our ideas are not entirely based on a 'do your own thing' philosophy.

"The society's first and foremost concern is to offer people a service which will help them cope with the increasing leisure time which is a direct result of our rapidly growing technology. The service is threefold: to help people prepare for and adjust to a creative use of leisure; to help people develop a more meaningful life based on their own creative process; and lastly to build centres where this work will be carried on.

"These are our long-term goals. Some of the projects we are presently involved in are: organizing a conference on The Leisure Society, arranging to show a film which we produced entitled "Towards Creative Leisure" to various interested groups in the community and organizing discussion groups in the community on "The Theory of the Leisure Masses.

"We hope that the community can accept the validity of our work and support us in our endeavor to establish these vital services."

Old Oil Won't Be Dumped

There is "just no way" that the Capital Regional District will allow used oil to be dumped into its sanitary sewers, chairman Hugh Curtis said today.

He was commenting on the threatened closure in the next few months of Star Oil Refining Co. Ltd., 1651 Old Island Highway, which picks up used oil from service stations and other sources and re-refines it for re-sale.

"I will be talking to our engineering people within the next few days," said Curtis.

NOWHERE ELSE

He also said if the regional district can provide an acceptable means of disposal "that's all right."

Star Oil manager Allan Vanderkerkhove said Monday he intends closing down "in a few months" and predicted a serious pollution problem with disposal of 10,000 gallons of used oil a month.

He feared that if Star Oil closes and there is nowhere else for used oil to go, it will go down sewers and pollute beaches and the sea.

He said Star Oil's threatened closure is because there is not enough oil in the area to keep the company operating.

'JUST AS WORRIED'

A local service station operator, Bob Dunsmuir, who is a director of the B.C. Automotive Retailers Association, said there is nothing which can be done with the old oil.

"It's against pollution laws to dump it down the drain and it's also against the law to burn it," he said.

He was going to Vancouver to discuss the problem with oil company officials.

Hearing Aid Shysters Prey on Aged

Greater Victoria's senior medical health officer warned senior citizens Tuesday to beware of high pressure salesmen pushing expensive hearing aids.

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread said there have been complaints from Silver Threads organizations that this is going on. He cited the case of an elderly person who was persuaded to buy a second-hand hearing aid for $400.

Hearing aids should not be sold to the elderly without the advice of the family physician and an audiologist, said Whitbread.

"We are unable to supply this necessary and most vital consultative service to the Silver Threads Society until an audiologist is available on our staff."

Region Rapped for Giving Lease to Riders

★ ★ ★

By HUMPHRY DAVY

Conservationists today criticized the Capital Regional District for leasing to a private club publicly-owned parkland overlooking one of the most beautiful waterfalls on southern Vancouver Island.

Colwood Trail Riders were granted a five-year lease on land in Witty's Lagoon Regional Park — one of the most attractive areas acquired by the regional district.

●

The regional board paid $70,000 for the 10-acre property, but last year leased part of it — apparently without any controls to prevent it from being despoiled.

"This is absolutely wrong," said Elton Anderson, a former logging contractor and an official of the B.C. Nature Council. "This parkland was bought with taxpayers' money. It was for their general use."

(Taxpayers pay half-a-mill a year towards the acquisition of parklands).

Anderson wants the board to strictly control, the development of the land by the club.

"The board should stop the club from making any capital investment on the property or we will never get them out of there," he said. "This is the thin edge of the wedge."

●

The property slopes down to the lagoon — a choice picnic site — overlooking the sandy spit and the sea, while to the left tucked away in a small cove is a 60-foot waterfall which few Victorians have seen because the land was formerly privately-owned.

In early days, the Indians called it "The Sitting Lady Waterfall," but now it is known as Bilston or Metchosin falls.

The regional board has leased to the club a cabin overlooking the waterfall — the best site on the property and area for parking cars and sufficient land for a riding ring.

The property is on the south side of Metchosin Road, a short distance from the golf club. Its entrance is marked by gate stone pillars being erected by the club, but apparently without permission from regiinal district planners.

If the Board Doesn't Stop Their Plans 'We'll Never Get Them Out'

The public has access to the property, but most leave their cars on Metchosin Road and walk down the driveway. They can see the waterall by going around the club house.

Already the club is showing signs of digging in. A fence has been constructed on the west side of the cabin barring direct access to the fall, but it is possible to get around.

●

Some trees on a southern slope have apparently been cut down or thinned out. There are signs of soil erosion. A bulldizer has scarred the upper part of the property.

"If club members cut down those trees, they didn't get permission from us," said Tony Roberts, regional director.

Dr. John Harris, president of the Victoria Outdoor Club, said an inventory of the property should be undertaken immediately and the remainder of the property left undisturbed.

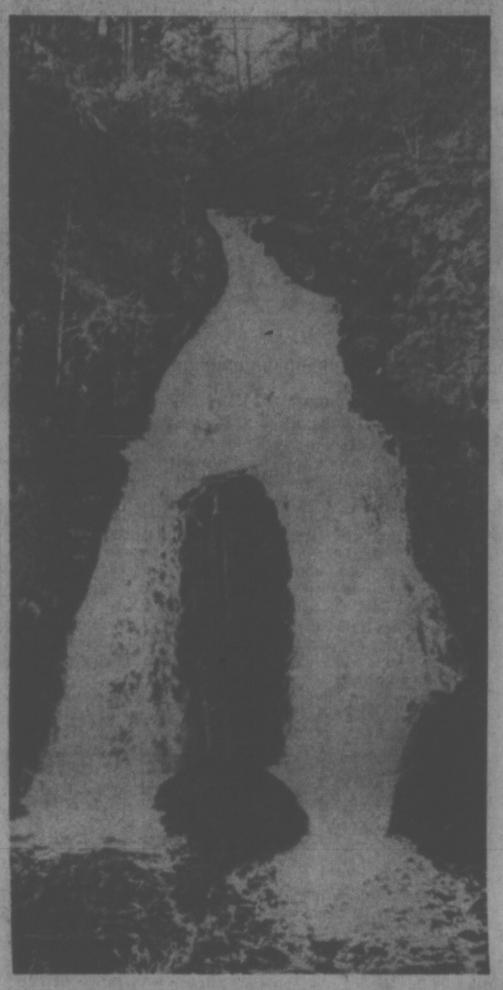

Douglas Turnbull, a former executive of the Victoria Natural History Society, said he was opposed to the principle of leasing parkland property bought with public funds.

●

"What will the board do if other clubs make requests to lease parklands?" he asked.

John White, president of SPEC, said when he first heard of the land deal, he was under the impression the club had only been given access to the property.

"The whole thing smacks of political manipulation," he said. "Taxpayers should be on guard — should see that their land is not frittered away."

POWER TO OVERSEE PATIENT FEES

Gov't to Widen Nursing Home Control

Broad powers to control the operations of nursing homes will be consolidated by the provincial government in a bill to be introduced later during the legislative session.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark told the legislature the bill would provide uniform standards and regulations for all types of "intermediate care" facilities including private hospitals, nursing homes and rest homes, under his department. Rest homes are currently under the rehabilitation department.

Outside the legislature he acknowledged that it would give the government power to control the rates charged to private self-supporting patients in addition to present controls over rates for welfare patients.

'VIGOROUS ATTACK'

He gave no indication the government intends to use such new powers, but said the move was "preparatory to a more vigorous attack on intermediate care."

In his speech, Loffmark said he wanted to make clear that the only way to establish a province-wide system of government-supported nursing home care would be under a federal cost-sharing program.

Such a program would be "a major fiscal and social program" not unlike the introduction of medicare which could cost $150 million next year in B.C.

Federal cost-sharing would be required, he said.

TAX SUGGESTED

But Dr. Scott Wallace (SC — Oak Bay) later told the legislature the province could afford to enter the nursing care field and suggested a new tax should be levied if necessary to produce the needed revenue.

All advertisements costing more that $50 should bear a one per cent tax except for classified advertisements in newspapers, personal advertisements and government advertising, he said, referring to "vast sums" which are spent on advertising each year.

Wallace estimated the cost of providing $1,000 annual government aid to nursing home or intermediate care patients would run to $12 million a year and the cost of building or acquiring beds for them would be about $40 million, of which the province would pay $24 million and regional hospital boards $16 million.

Loffmark said later that Wallace's estimate of 4,000 intermediate care patients was far too low. The minister said that if only 10 per cent of the 65 to 75 year age group (100,000 people) and half of the over-75 group (90,000) qualified for intermediate care, that would be 55,000 persons or $55 million a year.

The president of the B.C. Association of Private Hospitals and the operator of a local rest home today both applauded the move toward uniform standards and controls.

But to the question of government control of rates for nursing and rest home care they adopted a wait-and-see stance.

John Hanrahan, operator of Beacon Hill Villa rest home, said operators had asked the standardized rules and change in jurisdiction some time ago.

As for the rest, "we don't know what Mr. Loffmark is going to do so we can't say anything at the moment."

He did add that rest home operators still regard the government's $150-a-month subsidization of welfare patients in rest homes as a ridiculously low rate.

R. J. Shepherd, president of the B.C. Association of Private Hospitals, said from Vancouver the association has always favored controls over nursing care, not only in private hospitals where there is already control, but in rest homes too.

"As far as establishing rates, we'll have to know a lot more."

Ask the Times

Q. Is there a school or individual teacher in Victoria that teaches lip-reading? How could I get in touch with them?—C.V.C.

A. There is no school or teacher in either Victoria or Vancouver that teaches lip-reading. However, Mrs. P. G. Odynsky, 3874 Cadboro Bay Road, is able to teach sign language and is a representative of the Western Institute for the Deaf. She could tell you exactly what services are available, and where, for the deaf. Her phone number is 477-1108. Pre-school deaf children are taught at the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children and the Greater Victoria school board operates two classes for the deaf at Uplands school.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ONCE WHEN THE NEED arose, a friend and I prepared a dinner for guests that was better than merely good.

The cocktail shrimps basked in a sauce that contained just enough horse-radish and not too much lemon. The roast emerged from the oven brown on the outside but juicy on the inside. The mashed potatoes were lumpless, the gravy no less so, and the apple pie fairly melted in the mouth.

I should explain here that my part in this feast was confined to setting the table, general flunkying, and washing the dishes. The other guy not only did the cooking — he refused to allow me within arm's reach of the stove.

This isn't to say that I can't whip out a meal when necessity demands. Give me a fire-pit on a beach, a stack of damp sea-lettuce, a mixed bag of crabs and little-necks, and nobody willing to accept a grain or two of sand with his chow need go hungry.

That kind of cooking is simple and direct. It gives a man a degree of elbow-room not to be found in the well-regulated home kitchen. The Escoffier touch may be lacking, but the appetites run hearty.

Occasionally, though, a situation requires me to undertake a bout of indoor cookery. One of those emergencies overtook us this week.

My wife came home from Vancouver — an unhealthy city where winter lingers — with a chills-and-fever cold.

"Now look," I told her next morning, "you stay in bed. Don't worry about a thing. I'll fix you a nice breakfast."

"All I want is orange juice," she said, a little too hastily. Then, between sneezes, she offered a suggestion. "For dinner, why don't you just get something quick and easy like fish and chips?"

"You leave that to me," I said, and went out to ask Ron if he'd fancy a breakfast of Spanish omelette with mushrooms on the side.

"If you're doing the cooking," he said, "maybe we'd better keep it simple. Anyway, I have to rush. I'll just have a glass of orange juice." He added too casually. "Suppose I bring home fish and chips or fried chicken or something for dinner?"

Left to my own devices, I boiled water and dropped in an egg. It looked kind of lonely, so I gave it a companion. Both eggs promptly cracked . . . the hens aren't making them like they used to.

But dinner, I assured myself would go better. The orange-juice fanciers would have a roast, cooked by the book, with spuds, carrots and a couple of onions snuggled around it to steep in the rich juices.

It was a nice picture. I shared it with my dear one, not bothering to mention the cracked eggs and the coffee that had boiled over.

There's nothing to cooking meat, I explained to her, then went on to tell her about some memorable steaks from a young, berry-fed bear, which we'd broiled in a campfire on greenwood sticks.

"Well," Win said, reaching for another tissue, "I'd just as soon not have this roast on a stick." She then furnished instructions which I found almost childishly simple. I made a mental note of them, and when the afternoon was well along, set to on my dinner preparations.

Oven pre-heated to 325 degrees. Check.

Roast dusted with salt, pepper and garlic powder, ringed with vegetables, and put in at 3 o'clock. Also check.

Nothing to it! Easier than toasting bear-meat. But as time passed, a couple of minor problems developed.

The roast didn't seem to be cooking fast enough. I ran the heat up a few notches.

When I next peeked into the oven, a gust of steam fogged my glasses. Still, it doesn't require vision to realize that something is burning.

The carrots were a loss, and so were the onions. Nothing to do but pry them loose. Also, the potatoes weren't going to be quite as I'd visualized them, and the roast had shrunk alarmingly. I turned it over — that took some prying too — shoved the pan back in, and hoped for the best.

They aren't making roasts like they used to, as I observed to Ron at what passed for dinner-time. Then I told him about bear-meat cooked over a fire that required no temperature settings.

The chances are excellent that I'll be off kitchen duty tonight. But if not, I have a menu pre-planned and heartily approved.

Fish and chips.

Victoria Curlers Gain Canadian Senior Final

KIMBERLEY — Gordon Moore of the Victoria Curling Club did it again! For the second time in three years, Moore will represent British Columbia in the Canadian senior men's curling championships.

Moore, skipping Gordon Hooey, Dick Pick and Jack Smith, captured the berth and the provincial championship Tuesday by nipping Reg Stone's Trail entry 7-6 in the deciding game of a best-of-three final series.

The two rinks, Moore of the Pacific Coast Curling Association and Stone of the B.C. Curling Aossociation, each won once Monday.

Moore began with an 8-7 win and then was tripped, 11-5.

And it looked for a while Tuesday as if Stone, who has captured the B.C. men's title many times, would add another trophy to his shelf. The Trail resident had a three-rock lead beginning the eighth end but Moore tied it up on the ninth end and won it in the 10th.

Moore, who was runner-up in the 1969 Canadian final, makes his second bid for the title in Halifax later this month.

BILL WALKER

Baseball anyone? And the dastardly word has come down from above. The Baseball Writers' Association of America has rendered another disservice. Its members have decreed, in their eminence, that Early Wynn is not a proper choice for baseball's Hall of Fame.

The intrusion of baseball into the winter scene will have to be pardoned. There can be no dispute, because this is an art that always has intrigued your obedient servant, even though he encountered more than ordinary problems in attempting to get the side out on occasions.

And Early Wynn, the hulking one-eighth Cherokee Indian, just happens to be one of the ballplayers who, especially in his later years, come on to be one of those aging guys who had to be admired.

To bring the non-believers completely into the picture, the record book states what Wynn won 300 games in his major league career. There have been bigger winners. But not many. And three years ago when Red Ruffing of the New York Yankees was granted a place in the gallery at Cooperstown, his accomplishments were laid open for all to see. He had won 273 major league contests. Which is 27 fewer than Wynn recorded.

●

Further scrutiny reveals that Wynn was in the majors for more than two decades, five times he was a 20-game winner (Ruffing only four) and even when Early had lost his fast ball he got by with his noggin. He psyched the batters with a slow windup and a fistful of junk; and he lived strictly by the rules of his trade. An opposing pitcher who threw at one of his teammates was going down the next time he got to bat. It was an article of faith with Wynn. Few dared to doubt it.

The classic that is repeated most often concerns Gil McDougald. The ex-Victoria played who gained stardom in New York had an exaggerated batting stance in which his left foot was far forward of his right. One day Wynn protested to the plate umpire that McDougald's foot was over the line in the batter's box. The umpire replied: "His heel is on the line, only the toe is over. I'm not going to move him back."

Wynn's reply was: "Either you do, or I will." On the next pitch, McDougald moved back, flat on his back.

Of course, it is easy to make a case for an ex-baseball star, and to cite all the accomplishments would be a useless manoeuvre. Still, in the 23-year period since Lefty Grove was the successful nominee in 1947, there have been pitchers named to Cooperstown. Not one could match Wynn's record, not even Dizzy Dean, for all his glory. He won only 150 games.

But if Wynn is getting anxious, he is in good company. There are a number of players standing in the wings with him. There was the story out of New York that Yogi Berra was a stickout candidate in this, his first year of eligibility. Berra did top the vote with 242, two more than Wynn recorded. But now, he too, will have to wait until next year, or later.

●

Not that this is unusual. Rather it is the pattern, if a confusing one. Ask of the game's slugging greats. Ralph Kiner has been standing outside the door for 10 years now. He was seven times a home-run champion. A fellow by the name of Babe Ruth was the only one better. Babe was the best 12 times. Kiner once had back-to-back 50-home-run seasons. Only four players in all of baseball history can claim that distinction.

Bullet Bob Feller gained immediate admittance to Cooperstown when he became eligible. So did Ted Williams. Also Stan Musial. But Joe DiMiggio had to wait for three years, Roy Campanella for six. And they were pretty fair ballplayers.

A player must have been out of the game for five years, and have completed at least 10 years in the majors to qualify for enshrinement. Thus the list grows with each year, and makes selection that much more difficult.

It has been said, too, that tradition demands that nobody gets his name on the final honor roll easily. The writers obviously live by this creed, or why again would fellows such as Gil Hodges and Enos Slaughter be forgotten so quickly and almost completely? They didn't even make the top three in the voting this year.

But for Wynn, his credentials do appear at least better than most of the candidates. Or as Hall of Famer Ted Williams is reported as saying:

"Wynn — he's the toughest pitcher I ever faced."

Even Under Shadow, Oscar Can Do It All

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Oscar Robertson might be overshadowed in Milwaukee by Lew Alcindor, but he still can do it all.

The Big O proved it Tuesday night against Detroit as he led the Bucks to a 107-106 victory over the Pistons for Milwaukee's 48th triumph in 59 National Basketball Association games.

Oscar had 25 points to keep the Bucks within two points of Detroit and then passed to Alcindor for the tying basket. Seconds later, he hit Greg Smith with a long pass with 22 seconds to go for the go-ahead basket.

Then, after Terry Dischinger of Detroit connected on only one of two free throws with eight seconds left, it was Robertson who grabbed the vital rebound and dribbled out the remaining seconds.

In other games, Los Angeles Lakers held off Cleveland Cavaliers 116-111, Atlanta Hawks beat New York Knicks 114-109, Phoenix Suns stopped Baltimore Bullets 114-109, Phoenix Suns stopped Baltimore Bullets 120-115, Boston Celtics nipped Chicago Bulls 90-88 and San Diego Rockets defeated Seattle SuperSonics 132-115.

Rangers Couldn't Shift Boston Heavyweights

Hodge, Esposito, Cashman Deal Blow to New Yorkers

By The Canadian Press

When you put together three hockey players who each stand six-foot, one inch and together weigh a total of almost 600 pounds, there's not much that can shift them, as New York Rangers found Tuesday night.

The heavy trio was the line of Ken Hodge, Phil Esposito and Wayne Cashman who had a hand in every Boston goal in a 6-3 Bruins victory over the Rangers.

The Bruins thus dealt a hard blow to Ranger hopes of regaining a challenging position for first place in the National Hockey League East Division. New York now is nine points behind the leading Bruins.

Elsewhere Tuesday night, Rosaire Paiement scored four goals to lead Vancouver Canucks to a 6-3 victory over Buffalo Sabres, Montreal Canadiens downed Pittsburgh Penguins 4-1 and St. Louis Blues tied Toronto Maple Leafs 3-3.

"No one can push us off the puck," said right winger Hodge who was credited with assists on all six Bruins goals. "It's not a finesse line. We have to bowl people over to get to the puck."

The Rangers outshot the Bruins 43-40 in the game and fought hard to hold Boston to a 1-1 tie at the end of the first period and 3-3 at the end of the second.

But the big Bruin line broke through for two third-period goals by Cashman and one by Bobby Orr.

It was Orr's second goal of the night and his 26th of the season. Esposito got his 47th goal in the second period.

Centre Walt Tkaczuk was the outstanding Ranger with two power-play goals in the second period.

The Rangers pulled goalie Gillies Villemure for an extra attacker in the final minute, but the tactic failed when Cashman got his second goal into the empty net, and Orr beat Villemure 17 seconds later for the final goal.

TAKE-CHARGE GUY

Vancouver, missing the leadership of injured captain Orland Kurtenbach, had a take-charge guy for one night at least when Paiement went wild with his spree of checking and scoring.

The four goals ran his season total to 16.

His first goal tied the game 1-1 in the first period and his second in the second period gave the Canucks a 3-1 lead.

The Sabres, led by two goals from Dick Duff came back to tie it 3-3 in the third period but Paiement banged two more behind Buffalo goalie Roger Crozier to put the game out of reach.

Jacques Lemaire's 19th and 20th goals of the season sparked the Canadiens to their win over a hard-checking Pittsburgh club that couldn't beat goalie Rogatien Vachon despite pelting him with 33 shots. The one goal that got by him came on a goal-mouth scramble.

The third-place Canadiens widened their lead over Toronto to five points in the East Division. The Leafs were in a position to keep pace when they held a 3-2 lead over St. Louis but a goal by Blues centre Chris Bordeleau tied it early in the third period.

KEON SETS MARK

Leafs centre Dave Keon set an NHL record for short-handed goals when he scored his 28th season goal in the first period. It was the eighth goal he has scored while the Leafs were shorthanded this season.

Boston's Jerry Toppazzini set the previous mark of seven in the 1957-58 season.

Show for Punch Wasn't 4-F Job

VANCOUVER (CP)—"I think Punch Imlach tried to make a fool of us and I think we showed him tonight what kind of a club we have."

Rosaire Paiement, the scrappy winger who scored four goals Tuesday night as Vancouver Canucks downed Buffalo Sabres 6-3 in a National Hockey League game, said it for the whole club as he spoke of the game and his own performance.

Imlach, coach of the Sabres, had described the Canucks as "4-F" in a newspaper column following Buffalo's 6-1 win over Vancouver Jan. 31, and the reaction from the last-place Canucks was a little more than Buffalo could handle.

"There was no way for us tonight . . . Vancouver just had the jump on us all night," said Imlach.

Paiement, who had never before scored three goals in a regular-season game, said he was thinking in terms of three after scoring No. 2.

CAME ON REBOUND

"I sure was. I was really looking for it and I asked Andy (Boudrias) to feed it to me if he got a chance."

As it turned out, goal No. 3 came on a rebound, with Wayne Maki getting the assist.

"I'm not sure just how it came out," said Paiement, "but I know it was a rebound and I flicked a wrist shot to the top lefthand corner."

Paiement, who became the Canucks' self-elected "policeman" after captain Orland Kurtenbach was hurt in December, had scored just four NHL goals in regular-season play before this season and went into Tuesday's game with 12.

SATCH STILL WOWS THEM

Proving he is a star in speaking league as he once was on baseball diamonds, Satchell Paige has baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn convulsed with laughter as he answers questions Tuesday after being voted into baseball's hall-of-fame. Long famous as apparently ageless pitching marvel and one of best hurlers of all time, Paige made hall-of-fame in special category designed to honor stars of former Negro leagues. Mike Shabaga Acquired As New Coach of Cats

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Mike Shabaga, the scoring hero in Canada's 1955 world hockey championship triumph over Russia, is the new coach of the Victoria Cougars.

His appointment was announced late Tuesday from Calgary by Cougars general manager Eric Bishop.

Shabaga, 48-year-old native of Saskatoon, thus becomes the British Columbia Junior Hockey League's man-on-the-spot. He succeeds Ron Maxwell and inherits a team that enjoys a six-point hold on first place in the Coastal Division.

★ ★ ★

Maxwell was relieved of coaching duties last week in a move that touched off a wek-long dispute which included a strike threat by all 16 Cougar regulars. The dispute was finally resolved after intervention by club president Bud Milner and director Jim Seymour, two of the seven-man Calgary syndicate which controls the Victoria franchise.

Shabaga's signing came while a few Cougar supporters were still seeking signatures to a petition demanding Maxwell's reinstatement as Victoria's coach.

The petition reportedly contained 320 signatures by Tuesday evening.

Shabaga was at his Saskatoon home when the Cougar syndicate announced its choice after meeting in Calgary. Milner reported Shabaga was his group's "first choice" although three others, including former Victorian Ed (Pistol) Dorohoy, had been considered.

★ ★ ★

Shabaga is expected to arrive in Victoria tonight and will assume control of the team immediately. He is expected to be in the box Saturday when Cougars visit Chilliwack and will make his Victoria debut Sunday when the team meets second-place Vancouver Centennials at Memorial Arenal.

Shabaga played professionally with Cleveland Barons, Hershey Bears and Buffalo Bisons, and with Owen Sound, Saskatoon, Trail and Penticton in the hey-days of senior (Allan Cup) hockey.

He also coached teams at Powell River and Saskatoon, and more recently was general manager and coach of Swift Current Broncos in the Western Canada League.

He resigned from his Swift Current posts early in December after a "conflict" with other team directors. Broncos, at the time, were only three points behind second-place Calgary Centennials in the Western Division of the WCHL. They are now 29 points behind Calgary.

But Victoria fans may best recall Shabaga for his feats in Penticton Vees' 4-2 victory over Russian in the final game of the 1955 world tournament.

Small but shifty and always a scoring threat, Shabaga scored Penticton's first and third goals.

'OVER-ACHIEVER' WINS GOLF'S HOGAN TROPHY

QUINCY, Mass. (AP) — Larry Hinson is the winner of the Ben Hogan Trophy, awarded by the Golf Writers' Association of America.

The award is made annually to a person in golf who has recovered from a serious disability as did Hogan, who came back from a crippling automobile accident to play championship golf.

Hinson, 26, has a withered left arm as a result of polio when he was five years old.

After his polio attack, Hinson, a native of North Carolina, who grew up in Georgia, vowed not to be remembered as "the kid with polio" but as a great player.

He said this drive made him an "over-achiever" in sports, resulting in his left arm being broken three times and his right arm twice.

Lawrence Threatens Plowe's Point Lead

Jim Lawrence is riding a hot streak and Victoria's Ted Plowe could lose his scoring lead in the B.C. Junior Hockey League before the Cougars get back on the ice.

Lawrence, who handles centre-ice duties for Vernon Essos, shaved a big chunk off Plowe's once-commanding lead when he collected 10 points last week on two goals and eight assists.

Plowe, who counted three times while the Cougars were drubbing the Essos 10-3 here last Saturday to run his league-leading goal total to 48, has now accumulated 89 points.

ASSIST LEADER

Lawrence, setting the circuit's assist pace with 59 helpers, has trimmed's Plowe's lead to three points and he will play two games before the Cats return to work Saturday at Chilliwack.

Essos will be at home to Kamloops Rockets in one of tonight's three league games and they journey to Kelowna Friday before returning home Saturday for a clash with Penticton Broncos.

Vic Mercredi of the Broncos is still third on the scoring list, 15 points behind Plowe and leading Vancouver's Neil Murphy by three and Victoria's Chris Riddell by four.

Dave McLelland of Penticton is the leading goaltender with a 2.12 goals-against average, followed by Victoria's Ed Forslund, who has a 3.09 mark.

California School Club To Play Here

Harvard High School of North Hollywood, Calif., was scheduled to arrive in Victoria this afternoon for the start of a four-match exhibition rugby tour.

Harvard, southern California champions for the past three seasons, are slated to play Shawnigan Lake Boys' School on their home pitch at 2:30 p.m. Thursday and Claremont at 1 p.m. Saturday at Centennial Stadium.

The visitors will then depart for Vancouver and matches against Point Grey on Monday and St. George's on Tuesday.

This will be the third year that Claremont, Shawnigan and Harvard have exchanged visits.

Claremont and Shawnigan were both beaten in California last season after a double loss here the previous year.

CINDERELLA COLT IN LINE . . . . . . FOR ANOTHER BIG PURSE

Flip That Dial . . . Plain Bob's Story Is True

By BOB MYERS

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Fans of the late-late-late movies on television know the plot. There was the guy who loved race horses but was too poor to get in the same class with the rich owners. Seems like Warner Baxter was the hero and somehow the name of Broadway Bill, who was the horse, comes to mind.

Baxter and Broadway Bill overcame all manner of hardship and backstretch intrigue and guess what? They won the Kentucky Derby. Or was it the Belmont.

Switch off the TV dial for a real life story.

There's this fellow R. K. Miller, better known as plain Bob. He has a one-horse stable in, of all unlikely places, Temple City, which is a neighbor of Arcadia and Santa Anita Park.

It seems Miller had this broodmare, Miss Ali, which he bought for $400. Enter the actor and horseman, George Brent, who also is prominent on the late-late shows.

PROBLEMS MOUNT

Brent loaned Miller the services of one of his stallions, Free Rounded II, and in due time Miss Ali foaled a colt. Two or three weeks later, Miss Ali died.

That left Miller with an orphan and mounting problems of keeping the little animal alive.

Miller drove over to the ranch of Rex Ellsworth for advice and, as it turned out, Ellsworth's last bag of a special formula, sort of like a baby's powdered milk.

The weeks passed and Miller bottle-fed the friend three times a day, living and sleeping in a cubby hole over the stall and keeping an eye on his patient through an opening in the ceiling.

The nourishment and treatment succeeded and in 1970 the colt, christened romantically Hanalei Bay, hit a jackpot. He won the $100,000 Hollywood Derby.

Miller, the owner, trainer, breeder and hotwalker for Hanalei, has the colt ready for another Cinderella role. The bay colt is a well-regarded contender for another big purse—Saturday's Strub Stakes at Santa Anita.

"I just hope we stay sound," says Miller. The collective "we" sounds reasonable enough.

City Bus Service to Be Cut

Details to Reveal New Philosophy

Cutbacks in bus schedules in Victoria and Vancouver are expected to be announced later this week.

Details of schedule proposals are being withheld by B.C. Hydro until the crown corporation advises municipal councils.

Hydro's board of directors are scheduled to meet Feb. 22 to consider an increase in fares. The last increase, to 25 cents from 20 cents, was in the spring of 1970.

Gordon Shrum, Hydro chairman, said Tuesday the schedule alterations would involve a "fundamental change in our philosophy" about urban transportation.

★ ★ ★

He said the transit system was losing $4.4 million prior to wage increases for transit division workers who settled for a 14¾ per cent pay raise over 27 months after a 32-day strike.

Shrum declined to elaborate on what the changes might entail until after municipal councils have been told. Hydro will announce the changes through newspaper advertising.

The B.C. government pays a $2 million subsidy to Hydro, leaving the corporation to offset the remaining deficit from other resources.

Transit loss on Vancouver Island has been $1 million and would be $2 million after the settlement, Shrum said.

Capital Regional District chairman Hugh Curtis said today cutbacks would not be an effective way of off-setting increased transit losses.

Victoria Mayor Courtney Haddock, Esquimalt Mayor Art Young and Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford were not available for comment this morning.

"It sounds very much like the CPR," Curtis said.

"It's costing too much therefore we're going to cut back. But cutbacks in schedules don't seem to be the answer."

He said decreasing frequency of bus traffic would only drive still more people away from the transit service, decreasing fare revenues and driving up subsidies.

★ ★ ★

Passengers who already have to wait "30 minutes to an hour" for buses will rely on alternative modes of transportation if schedule cutbacks cause even more inconvenience, Curtis said.

"Therefore less people will use the bus and subsidies will have to increase."

He said he was no expert in public transit and did not know what the ultimate solution to transportation problems would be.

"This is just another little scene in a continuing play," he said.

Hydro deficits in transit operation are expected to top $8 million a year by 1973 unless changes are made.

OVERLOAD BUSES END —HYDRO

A B.C. Hydro spokesman in Victoria said today "a number" of overload buses on various routes have been discontinued since the transit strike ended last Saturday.

No details were given.

One of the buses ran to Oak Bay Junior and Secondary High Schools twice a day.

It was patronized chiefly by students from the Cadboro Bay-Ten Mile Point area attending Oak Bay Junior and Senior Secondary Schools. It did not follow the regular Cadboro Bay bus route.

Parents in the area are reportedly upset by the fact that students now are forced to ride into the centre of town and make a transfer there, adding up to half an hour to the trip both going to school and coming home.

The B.C. Hydro spokesman said an overload bus is one which runs in addition to regular buses to absorb extra passengers.

Stage Set For Historic Victoria Meet

By JOHN MIKA
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The nation's government leaders Tuesday set the stage for turning their next meeting June 14-16 in Victoria into an event equalling the historic Charlottetown conference of the last century.

The participants at the latter became known as the "fathers of confederation."

If the participants at Victoria fulfill the surprisingly strong and broad promise evoked by their two-day meeting here, they could go down in Canadian history as the "fathers of the constitution."

Jubilation Among the Ranks

Prime Minister Trudeau's elated "great breakthrough" claim for the surprisingly substantial progress reflected the jubilation that permeates the ranks of an army of experts and officials who have been preparing the groundwork for the past three years.

Some have seen an analogy between the Charlottetown conference and the one coming in Victoria. Most appear to believe that this week's meetings have finally set the bandwagon rolling towards establishment of the first properly-framed constitution in Canada, based on an extensive rewriting and expansion of the script outline in the British North America Act.

Many agree with the prime minister that the real push came from ordinary Canadians who have turned out 7,000-strong already at some 40 meetings held in 25 cities since September by the joint parliamentary committee on the constitution.

Their Message Got Through

Their impassioned and impatient demands for changes great and small in the constitution are believed to have finally gotten some of the message through to provincial politicians that the federal-provincial talks had better start producing some results.

Co-chairman Mark MacGuigan (L-Windsor-Walkerville) today said in an interview that "the public meetings have been getting larger all the time and I think the momentum is going to keep building up."

The committee has about 20 more cities on its itinerary, including the province of Quebec, which could really turn the heat on the politicians between now and the Victoria meeting.

During its western swing, the committee drew 4,200 people to its hearings in British Columbia and Southern Alberta.

Impact on French-Canadians

The size and tolerance of the western turnouts dumbfounded many politicians. It had a major impact on French-Canadians and may well have made it possible for Premier Bourassa to accept an amending formula and the projected outline of a constitution as "feasible approaches."

The parliamentary committee's turnouts during its Quebec hearings this spring may turn out to be as crucial as the western swing in revealing even in French-Canada a strengthening demand for achieving a constitution which would bolster Bourassa's position for actually signing an agreement in Victoria.

Trudeau, pointing out that the committee had uncovered a stronger public feeling than anyone had been aware of, said the committee's continuing hearings would be watched with interest.

"I think the conclusions reached at the federal-provincial conference yesterday are useful not only in that they probably will be the basis for ultimate agreement on a constitution by the governments but also because they create a pause between the governments," MacGuigan said.

"We will be able to take a reading of public opinion on these proposals as we go throughout the country and we already have had them printed in our minutes last night so that they will be available to all those who participate in our hearings."

STILL TEETERING is part of the second and third floors of the Veterans' Hospital in Sylmar, a Los Angeles suburb, after the devastating earthquake Tuesday. Probers today are still digging into the debris in search of buried patients. (AP Wirephoto.)

Fear of New Tremors Grips Shattered City

LOS ANGELES — The death toll climbed to 44 today from the earthquake that has left the population of the third-largest city in the United States frightened of new tremors.

More than 1,000 were injured as a result of the rumbling quake that struck at 6:01 a.m. PST Tuesday and the hundreds of aftershocks.

Officials said 25 persons were missing, some buried in the rubble of two collapsed buildings at a Veterans Administrations hospital in the hard-hit west end of the populous San Fernando Valley.

It was too early to give a full damage estimate, but it will run in the hundreds of millions of dollars.

Twenty-five bodies had been found in the hospital wreckage; 45 persons were rescued. One hundred persons were injured.

So heavy and so interlocked were huge chunks of concrete from the virtually levelled three-storey structures that rescuers said it might be another day or more before all victims could be reached.

HEAR CRIES FOR HELP

Although cries of "Help me! Help me!" could be heard Tuesday night, authorities said there was little likelihood of more survivors being found. The bodies of five persons were extricated in the night and early morning hours.

Some 400,000 Canadians who emigrated to California live in the populous Los Angeles area.

The panic and confusion, and the many fires that broke out when gas mains were fractures, led to nine deaths due to heart attacks.

President Nixon declared the quake-stricken scene a disaster area, making it eligible for government help, including low-interest loans to rebuild.

National Guard troops moved into the ghost towns to prevent looting.

The main shock Tuesday was centred 26 miles northwest of downtown Los Angeles.

It crumpled much of the concrete facing the 150-foot-high dam of Van Norman Lakes, the city's largest reservoir, and cracked its

DNA Inhibits Cancer Cells In Animals

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Malignant cancer cells in laboratory rats have been restored to normal and future cancer growth inhibited, three scientists at the University of California at Los Angeles report.

Key to the finding, based on 10 years of research and experiments, was DNA, molecules in the cell which transmit genetic characteristics in the body.

The scientists said they isolated DNA molecules from the breast cancer of a rat and then incubated this DNA with live cancer cells. These cells were injected into rats and failed to produce cancer, the group said.

Dr. Richard M. Halpern, his wife, Dr. Barbara Halpern and Dr. Roberts A. Smith of the UCLA Molecular Biology Institute made the report in the proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, a journal.

"We want to emphasize that all our experiments and findings so far apply only to laboratory animals and not necessarily to humans," they said.

Bennett Pleased

VANCOUVER (CP) Premier W. A. C. Bennett is pleased with the results of Ottawa's two-day constitutional conference.

On his return to British Columbia late Tuesday, the premier told newsmen at Vancouver International Airport that the new formula to amend the constitution gives this province a key position "with just about the same powers as Quebec and Ontario when it comes to approving any changes."

Problem with Hydro buses may be t' tell th' diff'rence b'tween reg'lar service an' a cut-back service.

Seems we've agreed t' git our constitution back t' Canada but we still hev t' agree on whut t' do with it after that.

When nature makes war, th' best y' kin hope fer is a truce, subject t' cancellation without notice.

NEW CLEAN-AIR BILL PROVIDES STIFF FINES

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP) — Fines of up to $200,000 for industries found guilty of air pollution are provided for in a proposed clean air act given first reading Tuesday in the Commons.

The legislation makes the elimination of air pollution and preservation of clean air a top priority in the soon-to-be-established department of the environment.

Forestry Minister Jack Davis, who is to be in charge of the new department, said air pollution costs in Canada —including health, housing and building maintenance, laundry and cleaning costs— now amounts to $1.5 billion a year.

Under the bill, the federal government would be empowered to:

—Set national air quality objectives;

—Set national emission standards where there is a significant danger to health or where international agreements on air pollution are involved;

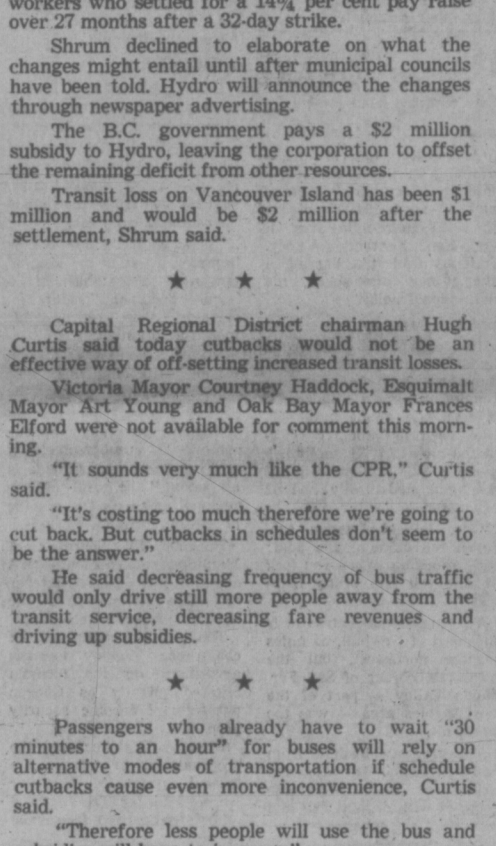

Penalties for infringing the emission standards would be as high as $200,000. Fines of up to $5,000 daily are provided for producing or importing prohibited fuels.

Federal plants would become models to follow in the fight against air pollution, Mr. Davis pledged at a news conference following the bill's introduction.

Provinces already had accepted in principle the need for national air quality objectives.

BETTING on the public's desire to break the bank A. B. Irwin (above with his five-girl teaching staff) is opening the El Casino College, where for $100 . . . or $75 if you're a lady . . . he'll teach you the fine points of gambling. Police, who recently took a look at the school, are reserving comment until they see it in action. (CP Wirephoto.)

Gambling Secrets For $100

TORONTO (CP) — A. B. (Bert) Irwin, who says it's easy to win at the gambling table, may be taking the biggest gamble in his life.

He has set up El Casino College where in four lessons for $100 he'll teach men how to win at craps, roulette or blackjack—but not poker, in which bluffing is a major element of play. Women may take the course for $75. The $25 price difference is not explained.

El Casino, billed as Canada's first gambling school, opens March 1.

Police took a look at the college the other night. Comment was reserved until they see the school in operation.

Mr. Irwin, 41, is the author of a $50 set of books which outlines a mathematical system applicable, he says, to any game of chance—except poker.

He gave up his job as a dental technician for the gambling table.

After practising for three weeks, he says he went to the Pacific National Exhibition in Vancouver with $80 and ended up $47.25 ahead playing a wheel of fortune. Then he took $800 to Las Vegas, Nev., where he says he won $6,000.

Then followed a "successful" three-week tour of Europe's gambling casinos.

He doesn't play any more. "The longer you play, the more immune you get to winning. The excitement is gone."

Halibut Industry In East Threatened

HALIFAX (CP) — "I figure with fish that's down that deep this mercury thing has always been there," says halibut skipper Garfield Anstey. "I don't figure it's anything new—they're making too much out of it."

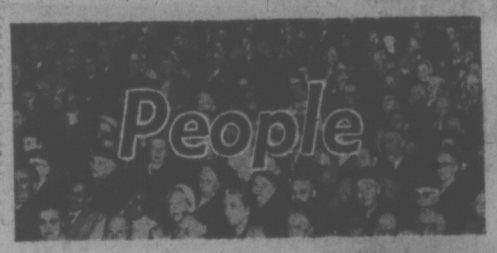

Nevertheless, high levels of mercury contamination have been reported in the larger halibut—over 100 pounds—following closely the discovery of intolerable amounts of mercury in swordfish off the North American east coast. Large halibut are being withheld from market until more testing has been done.

The mercury scare has brought the $4 million Canadian swordfishery to a standstill, and halibut men are worried that the same thing may happen to them.

The halibut, a big flat fish that feeds on the ocean bottom, is worth about $1.2 million annually to Nova Scotia fishermen.

"This is a good industry," says Captain Anstey, who operates two 92-foot halibut boats out of Halifax.

"Our men are happy. Some have been with us five years and more. We have eight men in a crew. We could do with seven, but the extra hand means somebody can have a holiday ashore. Wages are good —$7,500 to $9,000."

LONDON — Two girls who went to work in hot pants were in hot water today for raising male temperatures and lowering the production of British cars and cookies. Susan Best, 16, was fired for violating "decency rules" at a Peek Frean biscuit factory in South London. Kim Moon, 21, was scolded by the management at the British-Leyland automobile plant in Birmingham for taking up the new fashion rage but won her case. The complaint at both factories was that men were leaving the production lines to look at the legs. Kim wore a see-through blouse with her hot pants. The works manager asked her to go home and change into something less eye-catching. But he backed down when Kim won union support for her skimpy black shorts. "My view is that it's up to the firm to keep the men under control," she said.

ATKINS
. . . 'I killed her'

LOS ANGELES — Susan Atkins, in a dramatic witness stand confession, has said it was she who stabbed actress Sharon Tate and used the victim's blood to scrawl the word "pig" on a door during a nightmarish slaughter. "I killed her, I stabbed her and she fell," Miss Atkins said. "And I stabbed her again. I don't know how many times I stabbed her and I don't know why I stabbed her." Miss Atkins the first defendant to take the stand in the nearly eight-month trial, told her story at the penalty phase in which the jury must decide on life imprisonment or death for the convicted clan leader and three women co-defendants, of who she is one.

OTTAWA — Rotund Transport Minister Don Jamieson was asked Tuesday to "lend his great weight" to persuading Air Canada to hire more native Indian girls as stewardesses. Mark Rose (NDP—Fraser Valley West) told Mr. Jamieson in the Commons that he had not seen an Indian stewardess on any Air Canada flight during extensive travelling over the last two weeks. The minister, smiling weakly, was not given an opportunity to reply by Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureaux.

ROCHESTER, Minn. — Evangelist Billy Graham was expected to be hospitalized three or four days with about a week's recuperating period following surgery this morning for the removal of a salivary gland. The surgery was scheduled in Methodist Hospital here, according to a spokesman for the Mayo Clinic, who said the operation was recommended by Mayo doctors. Graham, 52, cancelled speaking engagements at the National Presbyterian Church in Washington Sunday and before the Golf Writer's Association in New York Feb. 16, but said he hoped to be able to keep an appointment for the North Carolina Governor's prayer breakfast Feb. 18.

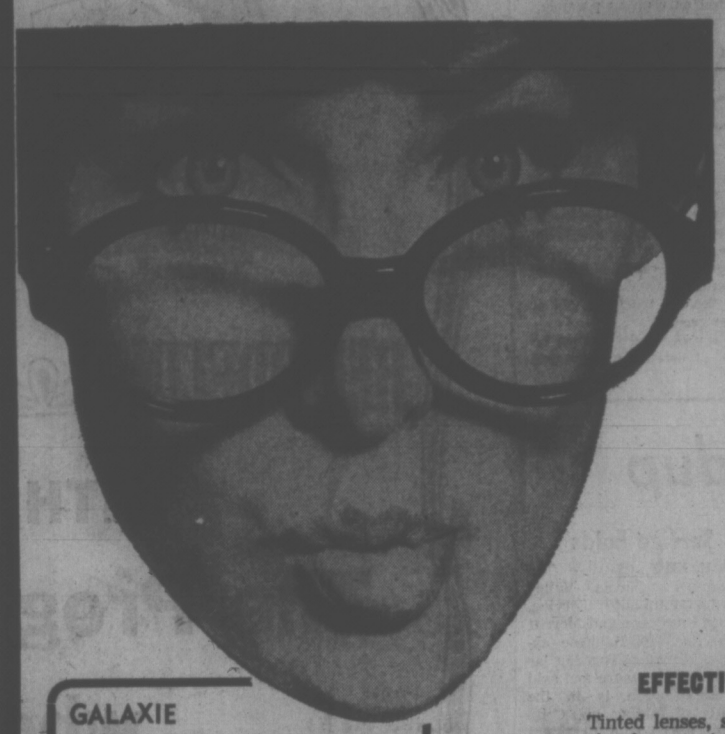

OTTAWA — Benzyl violet 4-B, a purple dye used for marking the federal grade on meat, may soon be restricted and possibly banned, health department officials say. Experiments with food and drug directorate rats indicate that the purple synthetic dye could produce cancer of the skin. The officials say a "remote possibility" exists that the dye could produce cancer in humans if too much was consumed, but they stress the dye does not pose a health hazard under normal use. Dr. Alex Morrison, deputy director of the directorate, says linking cancer with the purple dye is "questionable."
